It depends on the weather

Bypass may be completed this year, Bossman says

By MARK THELLMANN

In this day and age, the 12-hour day, repeated six and maybe seven times a week, seems like an anachronism.

But, that's just what the U.S. 35 Bypass construction is demanding!

Project Supervisor Paul Rooney explained: "We've come 80 per cent of the way since we started on March 7, 1971. Weather permitting, we should be done before the first of the year."

The original target date for completion was July, 1974.

QUESTIONED about the long hours 50 to 55 men put in each day, one worker chucked and said: "It's not so bad. You start at 7:30 a.m. and finish up at 7:30 p.m. Then you go home and drink a gallon of beer and you're ready for another 12 hours!"

Rooney and the men have been able to stay pretty close to schedule, but there have been problems.

John A. Dilley, labor steward, said that after the J.J. Blazer Construction

"The ground was softer than expected and we had to under-cut by digging two feet further down and reimpact the earth. That set us back 30 days," Dilley commented.

OUTSIDE of rainy weather, vandalism was also a problem.

Dilley said someone had recently shot out two windows of a grader with a BB gun and smashed out some others with a blunt object.

Rooney listed still another unsuspected problem.

"Some of the business establishments east of our U.S. 22 detour have been complaining they are losing patronage. It seems many people are taking U.S. 62 in and out of town to avoid the detour and consequently aren't passing by the businesses they'd usually stop in and patronize," Rooney explained.

Rooney admitted because of this, the men are working hard to finish U.S. 22 in the next two weeks.

One last problem which could slow the U.S. 35 bypass project down is the steel shortage.

"WE ARE having trouble getting reinforcing steel for the decks on the bridges," Rooney said, "But we're not special; everyone is having trouble getting steel."

The U.S. 35 bypass project, which is 6.1 miles long and costing $6 million, has involved many people.

Now that J. J. Blazer has laid the groundwork, many "specialty" subcontractors have been called in: Seidensticker Construction Co. is in charge of bridge work; Collier Construction is doing the electrical work; the L.P. Cavett Co. is doing the blacktopping; Armstrong Steel Erectors are doing the steel work and, finally, Petersons Construction Co. will finish the project with guard rails, fences and grass seed.

GLUE-LIKE GOO — A bulldozer may be able to plow through a house, but Ma Nature can halt more than just bulldozers. This is gushy mud left by a rainstorm which temporarily drowned out bypass work.

SO WINTER can'be be far behind. . . Gale Parrett, the faithful weather watcher at Parrott Station, said a flock of 20 mallard ducks circled in on a pond on his farm Wednesday evening. . . And nine more ducks (he thought they were mallards, too) spent Thursday night there. . . Both flocks resumed their flight south early the next morning. . .

NEARLY EVERYONE has an inherent urge to collect things, just anything even if there is no practical use for it..... Where is there a child who never collected pretty stones and brightly colored marbles?.....

But rockhounds are different ... They combine that collecting urge with practicality..... They collect pretty stones, too, but they also do something with them..... With their lapidary equipment, they polish and shape them and put them in rings, pendants and bracelets to create beautiful jewelry..... Some, however, just collect them to look at.....

They will travel hundreds of miles to the mountains in the West to hunt for, and collect, gems and semi-precious stones ..... They also buy, sell and trade "rocks," which they take to their home shops and work them over painstakingly for settings.....

Rockhounds of the Miami Valley Mineral and Gem Club, Inc., will meet from Saturday and Sunday in the Lions Club building at Fairborn to show their collections and buy, sell and trade among them-

Hunt youths in 2nd brutal murder

BOSTON (AP) — Two schools, closed because of fear of racial violence, reopen today at the end of a week in which two whites were brutally murdered by black youths.

A 24-year-old woman died early Wednesday after being drenched with gasoline and set afire. On Thursday, a 65-year-old fisherman was stoned and stabbed to death by a band of 30 to 40 black youths.

"No question the problem is racism and fear," said Chairman Paul R. Tierney of the Boston School Committee. "It's deteriorated to the point of these horrible murders and gone down to the level of children."

He was referring to the deaths of Evelyn Renee Wagler and Ludivico L. Barba, both of the predominantly black Roxbury area.

Mrs. Wagler was was set afire Tuesday night by six black youths and died early Wednesday morning, according to police.

A witness to the killing of Barba told police that the youths first stoned him as he was fishing in the ocean, then stabbed him with his knife and rifled his pockets.

He lived only 20 minutes away and often walked to the Bayside Mall area to fish, said his 55-year-old widow, Verna. She said they had been married a year.

Tierney, who called on Mayor Kevin H. White to meet with community leaders about the problem, said it was better to have pupils in school where police security was available than on the streets.

McCormack Junior High and Dever Elementary schools were closed Thursday morning because it was feared trouble might erupt a half mile away when 100 to 200 hostile youths gathered, authorities said.

That gathering produced no conflict, but police said that bands of black youths later roamed the low-income Columbia Point Housing Project, where Barba was killed. Another white man was stabbed and a white woman was hit with a bottle and robbed.

Police Commissioner Robert J. diGrazia said all three incidents occurred within 20 minutes. Police Supt. Jeremiah P. Sullivan said the attacks "are definitely tied together."

One 16-year-old black youth was arrested Thursday night and charged with armed robbery with a knife in the attack on Ronald Leonard, 37, of Revere, a furniture truck driver who was stabbed in an apartment hallway. Police also were questioning another youth.

Leonard was reported in good condition but still on the danger list at City Hospital.

The woman hit with the bottle — Clare Oates, 28, of Quincy — was treated at a hospital for a head cut and released.

Mayor White said on Thursday that the city was offering a $5,000 reward for information about the six blacks who murdered Mrs. Wagler.

Mrs. Wagler, a carpenter, was in this country on a German visa and had come to Boston from Chicago to stay with friends in Roxbury.

All POW charges are dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time, the secretaries of the Army and Navy have decided to throw out mutiny charges against four Army and Marine enlisted men who were war prisoners in North Vietnam.

Pentagon sources said Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway and Secretary of the Navy John W. Warner would cite lack of evidence, the same grounds for dismissing earlier charges against the two soldiers and two Marines.

The new actions, which were expected, clear the books of all formal charges against any of the 566 Americans who returned from North Vietnamese captivity early this year.

Three other enlisted men also were accused of mutiny, but they are now out of the Army and beyond the reach of military law. They, too, had been cleared previously of aiding the enemy and other misconduct charges. An eighth enlisted former POW shot himself to death before the first charges were dropped in early July.

Last week, Warner dismissed mutiny and other misconduct charges against a Navy captain and a Marine lieutenant colonel but formally censured them for "failing to meet the standards expected of officers" while they were POWs. The two officers are retiring.

The first set of accusations against the eight enlisted men were brought in late May by Air Force Col. Theodore W. Guy, who commanded a POW compound for nearly five years.

It took a little more than a month for the service secretaries to decide there was insufficient evidence to warrant further legal action leading to possible courts-martial.

Army lawyers acknowledged they had recommended dismissal of the charges without questioning 15 to 20 other former war prisoners who had been listed by Guy as potential witnesses against the accused soldiers and Marines. At the same time, other Pentagon legal sources said the Navy-Marine inquiry was less thorough than normal.

A few weeks later, Air Force Maj. Edward W. Leonard Jr., another former POW and a friend of Guy, accused the Army of failing to investigate Guy's allegations adequately. Leonard then filed new mutiny charges against the seven surviving enlisted men.

This time, the investigation took more than two months. Army lawyers said they questioned about 65 former POWs before forwarding their recommendations for dispositions of the charges.

Justice Department watchdog slated

Wiretap curbs planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what it called a drive to regain public confidence, the Justice Department said it is moving toward new wiretap restrictions and may soon appoint its own internal watchdog.

Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus disclosed those developments in an interview Thursday and said the department also is studying whether federal marshals, and possibly even U.S. attorneys, should be career officials rather than political appointees.

In line with Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson's orders, Ruckelshaus refused to discuss most aspects of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's harsh attacks on the department and its investigation of kickback allegations against him.

To do so would only fuel the argument, Ruckelshaus maintained.

Ruckelshaus, the nation's No. 2 law enforcement official, said the department is undertaking a wiretap policy review to determine "whether there are additional safeguards whereby we can assure people that this power is not exercised frivolously."

Without identifying them, he said a broad range of proposals to implement Richardson's goals are under consideration. Some would require legislation, he added.

The study, he said, focuses on taps employed for national security reasons rather than for domestic criminal investigations. The latter are governed by relatively explicit law while national security taps are regulated less by law than by tradition.

Recent criticism has targeted on such national security taps as those used against 17 government officials and newsmen in the White House effort to determine how the Pentagon Papers were leaked.

Such taps now must be recommended

Nixon confers with lawyer

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon, here for his first weekend stay in seven weeks, brought with him a White House lawyer closely associated with the Watergate tapes case and the problems of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Special Counsel J. Fred Buzhardt was among four Nixon aides who flew here with the President Thursday afternoon. The others were Staff Chief Alexander M. Haig Jr., Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler and speechwriter Patrick J. Buchanan.

Besides helping prepare Nixon's legal defense against surrendering White House tapes to Watergate investigators, Buzhardt participated in negotiations between the Justice Department and Agnew's attorneys. Federal prosecutors subsequently began presenting bribery and kickback allegations against Agnew to a grand jury in Baltimore.

Joining the presidential party here was counselor Bryce N. Harlow who last month flew secretly to Phoenix to discuss Agnew's situation with Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.,) Buzhardt, it was learned, also made that trip.

Response filed to Agnew charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Justice Department formally responds today to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's effort to stop the federal grand jury investigation of him.

A lengthy government brief is expected to rebut Agnew's contention that it is illegal to indict a vice president for any criminal offense.

Agnew's lawyers, in moving to halt the probe, said last week the Constitution clearly indicates that a vice president must be impeached by the House and convicted by the Senate before he can be tried in a criminal court. Agnew has requested a House investigation, but Speaker Carl Albert rejected the request at least for the present.

The government reply was ordered submitted by today by U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman.

The Justice Department is scheduled to answer by Monday Agnew's second challenge to the investigation, that federal prosecutors leaked information to the press in order to prejudice the jury against the vice president.

In letters to two newspapers Agnew rejected a suggestion that his own lawyers may have leaked information.

Agnew, in a Chicago speech Thursday night, avoided direct reference to the investigation.

The grand jury heard testimony from four witnesses for six hours Thursday, the same as Wednesday. It is expected to return to work next week, probably Wednesday.

The grand jury also returned another indictment against the Democrat who succeeded Agnew as Baltimore County executive. N. Dale Anderson was charged Wednesday with evading $67,833 in federal income tax from 1969 to 1972.

In August the jury had charged Anderson with extortion, bribery and conspiracy in a kickback scheme involving architects and consulting engineers doing business with the county. He has pleaded innocent.

The prosecutors reportedly are trying to build the same kind of case against Agnew, who has denounced the allegations as "damned lies".

Watergate panel hears more dirty tricks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A resentful Florida Republican says he did campaign dirty work last year to give Democrats "a little bit of the medicine they had given me in the past."

He said he blames Democrats for impersonating a newsman and for distributing phony posters against former Rep. William Cramer, an unsuccessful GOP Senate candidate for whom he worked in 1970.

Robert Benz, 25, said he was still rankled by that experience when he agreed to take a $150-a-month job from Donald H. Segretti, an undercover White House agent who hired him and others to disrupt Democratic presidential primary campaigns last year.

Benz testified Thursday at the Senate Watergate committee's first blacked-out public hearing. No live television coverage was provided because ABC and NBC have ended their rotating coverage, and CBS is broadcasting selected testimony.

Benz said he hired spies, hecklers and pickets; ordered the stink-bombing of two of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's campaign posts on primary eve, and ordered mailing of the "sex letter," which accused Sen. Henry M. Jackson of being a homosexual and said Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey once was found with a prostitute.

"I felt that if the Democrats got a little bit of a dose of their own type of activities, then they would be a little bit reluctant to do this to us in the future," said Benz, a loading dock foreman from suburban Tampa.

He said he could not prove Democrats actually were responsible for the alleged anti-Cramer incidents in 1970, and he said he didn't mention them to authorities until the FBI began questioning him about his own activities early this year.

Earlier Thursday, the committee heard from another Segretti associate, Martin Douglas Kelly, who repeatedly expressed regret for his own campaign of harassment against Democratic presidential contenders.

Kelly said he placed phony newspaper and radio ads, hired pickets, disrupted a Muskie news conference, dispensed false press releases and phony campaign leaflets, and once paid a female acquaintance $20 to strip naked in front of Muskie's hotel and yell, "Muskie, I love you."

The panel recessed its hearings until next Tuesday, when it plans tentatively to hear from two more alleged GOP spies.

In other Watergate-related developments Thursday:

—U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica took under advisement the committee's request for a ruling upholding its demand that Nixon give the committee tape recordings of Watergate-connected conversations. Nixon's lawyer contended in oral arguments Thursday that the panel had no authority to sue to seek the tapes.

—Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy asked a federal appeals court for a new trial on the ground Sirica violated his constitutional rights in his trial in January.

Deaths, Funerals

Mrs. Laura Harris

LONDON — Mrs. Laura Harris, 81, of 17 Kendall St., died at 3:18 p.m. Thursday in the Madison County Hospital.

Born in Pike County, she had lived in Jeffersonville before moving here 16 years ago. She was the widow of Early Harris and a member of the First Baptist Church.

She is survived by two sons, Charles, of Washington C.H., and Orlyn, of Germantown; two daughters, Mrs. Earl (Blanche) Harris, of Cedarville, and Mrs. William (Christine) Jackson, of London; 14 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Services will be held at 1 p.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Robert Wilson, of London, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, Jeffersonville, with the Morrow Funeral Home there assisting. Friends may call at the Chester R. Geer Funeral Home here from 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday.

HAROLD E. JUSTICE — Services for Harold E. Justice, 67, were held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the Kirkpatrick Funeral Home, New Holland, with the Rev. Printis Spear, pastor of the New Holland and Atlanta United Methodist Churches, officiating. Mr. Justice, a mill operator, died Monday in his home at Atlanta.

Jobless rate unchanged 4th month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate stood stubbornly at 4.8 per cent last month as a larger than expected number of teen-agers remained on the job, the government said today.

The Labor Department, reporting an essentially unchanged nationwide job picture for the fourth straight month, said the labor force — the number of people holding and seeking jobs — fell less than it usually does in September because more teen-agers decided to continue working rather than return to school.

Because of this situation, the department figured that total employment encreased by 700,000 by taking seasonal factors into account. It was the first monthly increase in employment since June.

The labor force usually declines sharply in September as young people return to school. The decline was so mild this year that the department figured a seasonally adjusted 750,000 person rise in the labor force, with teen-agers causing most of that increase. At the same time, this number of jobs declined less than usual for September, and the government figured a seasonally adjusted increase of 700,000 to 85.1 million.

The Nixon administration has predicted that the jobless rate would fall to about 4.5 per cent of the work force by the end of the year, then remain at that level well into next year.

The number of people out of work was essentially unchanged, the department said, remaining at 4.3 million.

Burglary wave defendant, 17, joins Marines

The evidence against a 17-year-old Washington C. H. boy charged with 15 counts of burglary and theft was heard by Juvenile Court Judge Rollo M. Marchant Thursday afternoon.

Judge Marchant found the youth delinquent but deferred disposition when he learned that he had been accepted by the U.S. Marine Corps.

The youth was scheduled to leave for boot camp Friday and Judge Marchant decided to postpone any action as long as the boy remains in good standing in military service.

Nusken resigns post as PUCO secretary

Nusken, who had held the post for the past 17 months, will head the legal staff for the Ohio Power Citing Commission. The commission was set up in 1972 to make sure major utility facilities meet environmental and public requirements.

Doctors proclaim house call revival

DENVER (AP) — Family doctors are proclaiming a renaissance of house calls and the cradle-to-grave breed of physician.

"We've had a resurgence of doctors who want to practice family medicine," said Dr. James Price of Brush, Colo., at the end of a convention of family physicians here Thursday.

"We're now a recognized specialty within the medical profession, and we're not frowned upon any longer as the less intelligent graduates of medical school."

A spokesman for the academy said it now has 34,600 members, compared with 31,905 in January 1972. There were fewer than 28,000 members of the academy in 1962.

Among the more recent members is the fictional Marcus Welby, M.D., who has a certificate of membership on the wall of his office in his television series, the spokesman noted.

The spokesman said about 20 per cent of graduating seniors in medical schools now choose family practice, compared with 12 per cent in the early 1960s.

"Students are more socially conscious than a generation ago," Price said. "They seek a person-to-person contact, an interpersonal relationship in depth."

Price said government funds and an image of prestige contributed to an increase in medical specialists and a decline in general practitioners since World War II.

"But now the public is demanding that, if they pay taxes to support a medical school, they have a right to obtain a physician to take care of them," he said.

Price said he treats 40 to 55 patients a day in his rural eastern Colorado office and said he makes house calls about three times a week.

"But we can't make house calls as often as we used to," he added. "The physician supply is too small."

He predicted there would be a severe shortage of family doctors for years to come.

Dr. Basil A. Moskoff, 46, of Zeigler, Ill., a convention delegate, said, "I think the pendulum has swung away from the specialist. People want a bit more than a doctor to simply read a chart. They want a doctor to know a patient."

More butter imports eyed by government

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are signals that the Nixon administration may soon open the door to more butter imports, a move that producer spokesmen say would hurt hard-pressed dairy farmers.

Patrick B. Healy, secretary of the National Milk Producers Federation says the Cost of Living Council reportedly is pressuring President Nixon to raise butter import quotas.

Government officials, however, refuse to confirm or deny the reports cited by Healy. Those claims were listed in a letter Thursday to John Dunlop, director of the council.

Healy told Dunlop a seasonal summer bulge in butterfat requirements to make ice cream is receding and that more of the ingredient will be available soon to make butter.

Thus, Healy said, an increase in the butter quota is "totally unwarranted" at this time.

Agriculture Department officials said privately that they had heard rumors of an impending boost in the annual butter quota — set at 707,000 pounds per year since 1953 — but that nothing has turned up to confirm the rumors.

However, one source said the White House already had decided to enlarge the quota and that 15 million pounds of New Zealand butter already has arrived, held in bonded warehouses until Nixon makes the increase official.

High feed costs have offset gains in milk prices this year, forcing many dairy farmers to trim their herds or sell out altogether Milk production this year is expected to be down at least 3 per cent from 1972.

Food price spurt seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's chief economist said today consumers should expect rapid increases in food prices in the neighborhood of 10 per cent over the next six months before the rate levels off.

Dr. Herbert Stein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, gave the gloomy forecast at a news conference but still suggested that the inflation rate will be better than it was in the first half of this year.

Stein said that it will take some time before food supplies catch up with consumer demand and with rising incomes.

He said that possibly by the end of 1974, consumers might see some decline in food prices. But he said he is not very confident of that.

Seaman completes special course in fire technique

Dave Seaman, a lieutenant with the Washington C. H. Fire Department, has successfully completed the Trade and Industrial Education course for firemen at Ohio State University.

Seaman, 524 French Court, is now qualified to instruct firefighting techniques. Seaman completed the 36-hour course while on vacation from the Washington C. H. department.

Every fire department is required to have a trained instructor for refresher courses and new techniques. Seaman will be instructing at village fire departments throughout Fayette County.

He has been a member of the Washington C. H. Fire Department for the past four years and is one of four holding an authorized lieutenant's post.

The National Weather Service forecast mostly sunny skies over Ohio today accompanied by somewhat cooler and drier air.

Temperatures today were expected to fall in the upper 50s and 60s in the north, and in the lower 70s in the south.

A high pressure area moving eastward from Missouri will hover over the state today, bringing more clear skies and light winds, and temperatures in the 40s.

The weather service is predicting more sunny skies on Saturday, with afternoon readings in the upper 60s and 70s.

It will be mild in Ohio Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with a chance of showers Monday or Tuesday. Highs all three days will range from the upper 60s extreme north to the mid 70s along the Ohio River. Lows will be in the upper 40s and low 50s.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Showers and thunderstorms dampened much of the eastern third of the nation today while isolated storms dumped heavy rains on southern Texas.

Flash-flood warnings were issued in southern Texas and more than an inch of rain was added to areas around Del Rio and Cotulla.

Other storms rolled over the lower Mississippi Valley and lingered from the eastern Great Lakes region to the Appalachians.

High winds damaged three homes, several barns and out buildings and caused injuries to one man in a farming area in extreme southwestern Pennsylvania, Thursday afternoon.

Three natural-gas wells cracked open and three homes were damaged near Nineveh, Pa., east of Wheeling, W. Va. No injuries were reported there.

Stock list goes higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices resumed their upward movement today, lifted by news of easier bank credit and signs the economy was slowing comfortably.

The Dow Jones industrial average was ahead 6.62 to 962.52 at noon, and advanced forged a 6 to 5 lead over declines in fairly light trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The Big Board's composite index was up .32 to 58.92.

On the American Stock Exchange, however, the market value index was down .42 to 105.73.

Reynolds Industries, up ⅛ to 45⅞, topped the active issues on the Big Board. Other volume leaders included First National City Bank, up ⅛ to 45½; Federated Department Stores, up ⅛ to 42½; and McGraw Hill, steady at 10.

Did GOP bug demos?

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County prosecutors say they believe that the Democrats' headquarters for the 1972 national convention here were bugged by Republicans.

"We believe it took place, and we believe we can develop the evidence to prove that it took place," Dade County State's Atty. Richard Gerstein, a Democrat, said Thursday.

Earlier in the day, however, Gerstein said in an interview with NBC-TV that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox had asked him to "withhold prosecution and, for the time being, we're going along with their request."

A spokesman for Cox refused immediate comment Thursday night, saying a statement on the situation would be issued on Friday.

Railroad plan being readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration soon will propose that the federal government guarantee $2 billion in private loans to rebuild the nation's railroads, sources within the Department of Transportation say.

Coupled with the loan guarantee, the sources say, will be a plan severely limiting the Interstate Commerce Commission's authority to require railroads to serve cities located on unprofitable routes.

Legislation to implement the proposals has been cleared by the White House Office of Management and Budget and will be presented to Congress in the next few weeks, the sources say.

Social Security boost approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee has approved a measure to increase Social Security benefits by 7 per cent.

The panel attached an amendment sponsored by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., to a minor House-passed bill Thursday. The increase would take effect 30 days after enactment.

A 5.9 per cent increase is to take effect next July 1. The Senate has voted to move the date up to Jan. 1 but the House hasn't acted on that measure.

Nixon drops in popularity

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The latest Gallup Poll shows another decline in public approval of President Nixon's performance in office.

Of 1,505 American adults who were asked, "Do you approve or disapprove of the way Nixon is handling his job as President?" 32 per cent said they approved. They were surveyed Sept. 21-24.

The President had the approval of 35 per cent in a similar survey Sept. 7-10 and 38 per cent in a late August poll.

Nixon's popularity reached its lowest point, 31 per cent approval, while the Watergate hearings were being televised in early August. His highest popularity, 68 per cent, followed the Vietnam peace settlement early this year.

In the latest poll, 59 per cent disapproved of Nixon's performance, while 9 per cent expressed no opinion.

Discussing the internal watchdog unit, Ruckelshaus indicated that Richardson is on the verge of creating an inspector general's office primarily assigned to investigating "extraordinary situations" involving the department in widespread public debate.

The office could handle such cases as internal investigations for improper leaks of information to newsmen, he said.

The vice president and his lawyers repeatedly have accused the department of leaking damaging allegations in a campaign to drive him from office, charges Richardson has angrily denied.

ABA seeks data on Watergate

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The American Bar Association has asked the Senate Watergate investigating committee for a special computer hookup to gather evidence on lawyers involved for disbarment proceedings.

American Bar Association President Chesterfield Smith, 56, of Lakeland, Fla., here to address the Cincinnati Bar Association Thursday, said he is awaiting word from Samuel Dash, special committee counsel, on the request.

"We want to purge from our profession any crooks who are unworthy of our high profession," Smith told a news conference.

Smith said Dash promised to take the matter up with the committee Cost of the hookup with the committee's computer was estimated by Dash at $30,000, Smith said. A complete transcript would cost $95,000, Smith said he was told.

Smith said the ABA wants to ferret out all information from the hearings involving lawyers in the Watergate conspiracy.

He said the information will be distributed to bar associations in eight states for disciplinary action.

"We haven't done much for states in the area of discipline," said Smith, noting the ABA had a membership of 173,000. He said the ABA would pay for the transcripts as a favor to the state bar associations.

Smith complained that the ABA has been the target of heavy criticism "because of 15 or 22 lawyers associated with the government in Washington, one, if any, practicing law.

"It's awful. It's blackened us, and we're trying to do something about it.

"There is a great chance that many lawyers involved with Watergate will not be convicted," because Smith said, pretrial proceedings have been "so prejudicial, and you're not going to be able to impanel a jury.

Smith said, however, bar association proceedings put the burden of proof on the accused lawyers. This differs from criminal proceedings in the courts.

"We could still disbar them," he said, citing former Attorney General John Mitchell as an example.

"If he were indicted and acquitted, we could proceed with the same facts and disbar. The bar has an obligation to the public to proceed with disciplinary proceedings."

Smith said there was no need for a code of conduct for lawyers.

Consumer resistance stiffening

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer resistance to rising prices is beginning to stiffen. One widely known business consultant on economic matters is forecasting a poor Christmas— for retailers.

The growing cautiousness of buyers hasn't demonstrated itself sharply to date, but attitudinal surveys show that many Americans have had their fill of spending for the time being and are now prepared to save.

Such forecasts in the past sometimes have had an uncanny accuracy rating, and few businesses are willing to ignore the findings. The first signs of weakness already are showing up in clothing, furniture and appliance sales.

Higher prices are listed as only one of the reasons. Among the others are:

—A growing burden of debt. The ratio of installment debt to after-tax income has risen to about 15.5 per cent. While this figure isn't unusual, it is considered somewhat high when combined with other factors.

—Perhaps the most important of these other factors is the inability of many workers to maintain their buying power. Goldman Sachs, the investment banking firm, notes that while disposable income rose at an annual rate of nearly 9 per cent during the second quarter of the year, inflation reduced it to an effective rate of 1.5 per cent.

Earnings of production workers in August rose 7 per cent over a year earlier, to $3.92 an hour, making weekly earnings of $145.43, about $9.27 higher than in August 1972. But higher prices resulted in a 2 per cent decline in spending power.

A further erosion of buying power can be expected in the final quarter of the year, according to Chase Manhattan Bank, which comments:

"For this reason, plus a host of others—ranging from news about the American dollar to interest rates, the stock market and Watergate—the public has turned decidedly pessimistic about economic conditions." As consumers retreat from the market place they are expected to tidy up their personal financial conditions. Expected to be most noticeable is a tendency to repay debt and build savings.

The present savings rate is about 6 per cent of income and is variously forcast to rise between one and two percentage points. In 1969 it reached a percentage between 8 and 9.

Such an increase would deprive retailers of billions of dollars in sales, although if conditions repeat themselves as they have in the past, a spurt in sales a year or so from now might equalize matters.

Dale defends Nixon on Watergate

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The original chairman of the Committee to Re-elect The President, himself a publisher, has attacked the news media for what he called giving the public false impressions about President Nixon's part in Watergate.

Francis L. Dale, publisher of The Cincinnati Enquirer, Thursday addressed the Cincinnati Rotary Club. He was the original chairman of the election group later headed by former Attorney General John Mitchell.

"The press has created a wrong impression in the minds of 38 per cent of the people," said Dale, citing a recent poll in which that many people believed the President had advance knowledge of the Watergate bugging.

"We have an obligation to correct that impression," said Dale.

He said he believes some newsmen seeking information on Watergate got help from partisan politicians with political motives, and from civil servants within the administration who "lean towards the Democrats" because they were appointed by Democratic presidents.

He said he believes "the press has earned some of the harsh criticism" stemming from Watergate coverage.

In some cases, Dale said, the press, instead of reporting, "is now an active participant ... a major factor in the course of events."

He said that in some instances the press "has prostituted itself" to the unidentified "reliable sources." He cited the New York Times as being "an attack dog" and the Washington press corps for "bias."

Dale said U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica "failed miserably in handling the Watergate cases and for "bullying them — the defendants — with tentative sentences."

Dale said the special Senate committee investigating Watergate has become "an albatross" to the Democrats. He charged that chief committee counsel Samuel Dash has "led" testimony, that "any competent cross-examiner would have made a shambles of John Dean's testimony," and that "after six months of the circus, there has yet to appear any significant draft legislation on campaign practices."

High court nixes appeals

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A former newspaper copy boy convicted of killing a police officer at Mingo Junction has lost in a bid to have the Ohio Supreme Court review his case.

The court ruled unanimously Thursday that no substantial constitutional question was involved in the appeal of Donald Nickerson.

He was charged in the slaying Dec. 30, 1970, of Michael Maguschak, a Mingo Junction police officer, during a shootout. Nickerson was shot and critically wounded, but eventually recovered and was convicted in Jefferson County Common Pleas Court.

His counsel based the appeal on self defense.

Nickerson, a former employe of the Dayton Daily News, sought at the time of the shootout for parole violation, was an associate of Gordon "Spunky" Firman, one of Ohio's most notorious outlaws who also was being sought for parole violation. Firman had run off with Nickerson's wife, records showed.

Firman, captured a short time later, once was known as the "barefoot bandit of Walhonding Valley" as a result of a 30-day spree in early 1960 that involved a number of holdups of truck drivers on lonely roads in the Coshocton area.

In other action, the Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal from an assessment by Summit County Commissioners of $450 for tap-ins for new sewer lines connections.

The Home Builders Association of Greater Akron appealed in common pleas court after the charge was ordered by commissioners July 18, 1972. That court held the assessment valid, and the Summit County Court of Appeals affirmed.

Jack Klein of Cleveland, arrested there April 14, 1972, for carrying a concealed weapon by plainclothes detectives acting on a tip, as turned down in another appeal before in high court.

Klein's lawyer claimed the search that produced a pistol from his trouser pocket "was not incident to a lawful arrest since there was no probable cause for arrest." The Supreme Court ruled that no constitutional question was involved.

Also was rejected was the appeal of Joseph M. McDonald of Cleveland, convicted of killing an off-duty detective, John Appanites Jr., in a Cleveland department store Dec. 3, 1969.

McDonald was sentenced to die in the electric chair, but on appeals court reduced the sentence to life imprisonment in 1972. The high court said there was no constitutional question involved in his appeal.

Probe Butler County crash fatal to 4

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Highway Patrol continued its probe today into a car-cement truck collision that snuffed out the lives Thursday of four small children and hospitalized their parents.

"The whole thing remains under investigation," said a patrol spokesman Thursday night. The spokesman indicated charges may be filed today.

"I couldn't stop," James Henson, 31, of Somerville, told officers from his hospital bed. Police said the Henson car left 72 feet of skidmarks on the road before ramming and overturning a cement truck on Ohio 127 at 73 in Butler County.

The police report said the Henson car speedometer was frozen on 60 m.p.h. after the collision.

Henson's condition remained fair, but his wife, Jacqueline, 32, was serious. She suffered multiple fractures.

Police said three of the children were thrown out of the car by the impact. The fourth was crushed in the wreckage under the dash board.

Ohio gasoline station closures postponed for next 10 days

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's independent gasoline dealers have postponed any widespread shutdowns of their stations for at least 10 days to give the government a chance to ease their plight under Phase IV controls.

The decision came following a meeting here that lasted until late Thursday night. Some 300 service station operators attended.

"In 10 days, if there is no relief, all I can say is you had better stock up on gasoline," said David Pickney, vice president of the Central Ohio Independent Gasoline Dealers Association.

"That's all I can tell you," he said. "There is no other alternative. The dealers have gone beyond their limits."

Pickney said dealers attending the meeting didn't get a chance to vote on a closedown resolution because their delegate to Washington, Walter Stein, mentioned efforts in Congress to provide relief and suggested the 10-day wait.

Most of the dealers, he said, came expecting a vote to shut down and probably would have approved it if Stein hadn't given his report at the beginning of the meeting.

The dealers are hoping, he said, that Congress will permit them to pass increased costs from the oil companies along to the customers. They can't do it now under Phase IV controls.

The dealers, Pickney said, are aware that a shutdown would hurt the customer. "I think they are owed a debt of gratitude in Columbus because they haven't closed up yet," he said. "They can only survive so long."

Stein, Pickney said, gave both sides of the story from Washington. "He mentioned especially the bill that would allow the dealer to pass on increases from the oil companies."

The Democratic party split

It is common knowledge that the Democratic party was badly divided over the choice of Sen. George McGovern to be its presidential candidate last year. The deeply traumatic extent of this split is set forth in detail now in the latest of the informative University of Michigan reports which the institution's Center for Political Studies has been producing since the early 1950s.

The gist of the report was presented to the American Political Science Association's recent convention in a paper significantly entitled, A Majority Party in Disarray." We are told that "above all else, the outcome of the (1972) election was the result of the ideological polarization within the Democratic ranks that pitted the left-wing Democrats against those on the right."

McGovern was essentially the candidate of the party's left wing. His position on the issues, according to the Michigan study, alienated so many Democrats that 42 per cent of those who went to the polls voted for President Nixon. The study does not support the view that popular aversion to McGovern was the most decisive factor in the outcome.

It finds, rather, that Mr. Nixon's position on most of the major issues - the Vietnamese War and amnesty, and a broad range of social questions - was closer to how the electorate felt about these matters. The voters leaned toward McGovern only on questions of urban unrest, inflation and the environment.

The crossing over of so many Democrats in 1972 does not lead the authors of the Michigan study to endorse the view that a Republican majority is emerging. Nor do they predict whether the Democratic split will be a permanent phenomenon.

What they do say is that for the first time since the Michigan studies began we had an election in which issues were more of a factor than traditional partisan loyalties. There is no doubt that the Democratic leadership has its work cut out for it in repairing the damage to the party.

'Shared aspirations'

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger made a nice speech to the United Nations about a "peace whose stability rests not only on a balance of forces but on shared aspirations." The speech went on to mention "humane values," but it scamped the far more important question of a shared conception of rights.

Some nations respect individual liberty, some don't. Some believe in such things as habeas corpus; others permit their police to knock on the door at midnight and take you away.

Achieveing "shared aspirations" and cultivating a common feeling about "humane values" in a world that has no agreed-upon theory of what is "inalienable" is rather hopeless, which is one reason Henry Kissinger, as a practical operator, deals almost entirely in the business of balancing the power.

The biggest blocsk in the U.N. — the Communist countries, the nations that belong to the Organization of African Unity — seem to be light-years away from Western conceptions of rights. In most of them the right to vote consists of a compulsion to endorse a one-party slate. True enough, the right to vote is stressed by the Liberation Committee of the Organization of African Unity when it is talking about Rhodesia and South Africa.

THE COMMUNISTS in Chile respected the franchise as a tactical weapon needed to bring Salavador Allende to power, and now that Allende has gone because he tried to ruin the middle class the Communists are weeping crocodile tears about the suppression of "democracy."

To hear the Communists talking about voting rights in democratic countries which they have not yet taken over, you might think that the franchise is the only important item in the whole quiver of rights. The same situation holds when the OAU Liberation Committee talks about the suppression of black majorities in South Africa and Rhodesia.

Personally, since I value the franchise, I don't blame people who want it for themselves everywhere. But if I were a white Rodesian or South African, I would also want some reassurance that, if universal suffrage were to be granted, my right to keep the fruits of my labor would remain intact no matter who ran the government.

No settler who has spent years of his life hacking a farm out of wilderness or bringing a new business into existence is going to give up what his life energies have created just to satisfy a conception of rights that discriminates against the right of ownership.

The Organization of African States will get nowhere with Rhodesia and South Africa as long as its members support the terrorist groups that are enumerated in a recent report of the American African Affairs Association. This particular study, carried out on the spot by Walter Darnell Jacobs, Carl Peterson, and William Yarborough, three first-rate reporters who have academic and military intelligence backgrounds, makes for horrendous reading.

The terrorists have a particular "thing" about electric power developments. Frelimo, a major terrorist band operating against Portuguese Mozambique, is trying to disrupt the building of $400,000,000 concrete arch dam at Cabora Bassa on the Zambesi River which would mean power for all southern Africa. There is no color bar in Mozambique, the first intended beneficiary of the dam, and if Frelimo succeeds in sabotaging the big hydroelectric project a million farmers, both black and white, will be deprived of irrigation.

OTHER TERRORISTS have threatened a dam project on the Kunene River in the northern part of Southwest Africa. The main beneficiaries of the Kunene project would be the Ovambo tribes.

The World Council of Churches, with its strange view of Christian charity, has opposed the building of the Kunene dam on grounds that, by making life easier for the Ovambo, it would also make them less revolutionary.

The more the terrorists oppose economic development and the rights of ownership, the less likelihood there will be of getting a universal right to vote out of presently constituted governments. People who have worked hard for what they possess aren't going to risk one right for another.

What Allende discovered in Chile has universal application.

WASHINGTON CALLING . . . by Marquis Childs

Rockefeller and Reagan

NEW YORK — The Presidential campaign of 1976 has to all intents and purposes already begun. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York and Gov. Ronald Reagan of California are all but avowed candidates for the nomination of the Republican party.

This may be good for the mineograph companies and the publicists who live off press releases, statements and speeches, but there is surely a question about the wisdom of so early a start on an election certain to be turbulent.

Most of Rockefeller's associates are convinced he will not run next year for a fifth term as governor. Instead he will devote his resources and his time to pursuing the Presidency. This will be a considerable gain, since it is estimated that in winning a fourth term three years ago he spent upward of $15 million.

Moreover, the conviction among political pros is that 1974 promises to be chancy for the ins of whatever party. While Rockefeller could in all probability get a fifth term — the Democrats in the state are leaderless — he would risk for no good reason all he has achieved. And, despite his persistent enemies, that achievement is formidable.

ROCKEFELLER'S approach to '76 differs from Reagan's as day from night. The New York governor is going about the country speaking to high-level groups about America's problems and what must be done to master them if we are to move into a third century as a free people.

To the American Political Science Association convention and to town halls around the country he discusses his proposal for a Commission on Critical Choices. He is presently engaged in enlisting high-level men and women to serve on this commission and also to raise the money, at least $4 million, to finance it from government and the foundations.

He takes this with the solemn, almost evangelical seriousness that reflects one facet of his temperament. Turning in its report in 1976, the bipartisan commission will set the tone for the bicentennial observance of America's independence. It will also put Rockefeller front and forward as the nation's problem solver.

ROCKEFELLER is well aware of his fundamental error in his three previous tries at the Presidency. As he put it recently, he had the polls but Richard Nixon and Barry Goldwater had the delegates. What you need, he was told by a friend, is someone who knows the congressional districts of this country like the palm of his hand; someone like, say, Melvin Laird. A forthcoming move will be to enlist such an adjutant.

For many long-term Republicans at the delegate level Rockefeller looks too liberal, too much the ideal of the Eastern Seaboard Establishment. His associates consider that one offset to this is in the tough drug-abuse law that the governor sponsored.

For certain hard-drug offenses it provides life sentences without parole. Rockefeller can show that the tough law has already brought a drop in drug crimes.

But this is incidental to his emphasis on the lead the state has taken in his 15 years as governor in education, housing, clean water, pollution control, welfare. In contrast, Reagan blows up his tax-ceiling constitutional amendment and his demand for an end to welfare chiseling.

SPEAKING to the Town Hall of California in Los Angeles the other day, Rockefeller described how, in effect, he had socialized the whole rail-commuter transportation systems serving New York City. That had become a necessity as fares threatened to jump to prohibitive levels under private operation. On the ballot in November is a $3.5 billion transportation bond issue, with 60 per cent for highways.

The Rockefeller approach to '76 follows a familiar pattern. Beginning in 1957 a series of reports on the nation and the world bore the Rockefeller imprimatur. They were prepared under the direction of Henry A. Kissinger, then on the Harvard faculty, who had a principal hand in writing them as well.

Rockefeller was jubilant when his long-time associate and friend, Kissinger, at his side during his 1968 search for delegates, was named Secretary of State.

One thing Reagan and Rockefeller have in common — they are careful to skirt around the mess in Washington. The New York governor makes only oblique references to the "cloud presently hanging over the conduct of public affairs."

Hal Boyle . . . Jumping to conclusions

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

Women rarely worry about marrying a man smarter than them, because they always feel that if they can't outwit a man they can always outmaneuver him by superior cunning. That's why a wife continues to try to remold her husband nearer to her own wishes. From birth she thinks of man as a form of workable putty.

More men would achieve success in this world, and enjoy life more, if they wore shoes one half size bigger. Tight shoes will cramp anybody's life style, as well as sour his personality.

An optimist is a man in middle age with a chronic disease who believes the onward march of medicine will find a care for it in his lifetime.

The quickest way to win a reputation as a bore is to insist on performing card tricks at cocktail parties.

It is no testimony to your popularity to be invited to spend a weekend at someone's country place. People who own country places would rather invite Jack the Ripper for company than face a weekend alone with themselves.

One reason civilization is such a monumental failure today is that it no longer inspires man to test himself to the utmost to see what he can do. Instead, it inspires him chiefly to escape blame for whatever happens. He would rather keep his nose clean than save his soul.

The most overrated food in America is steak, partly because of its current high price. But a really first-rate steak is, and always has been, a rarity. The ordinary diner can always get more real enjoyment of a well-cooked tasty pot roast or even meatloaf than a run-of-the-shop steak. A steak, even at a top restaurant, is always a gamble. There are fewer things duller than a steak diet, and if a dictator made the eating of steak mandatory at every meal, he would be overthrown by a revolution within three months. It would be the same, of course, if it were caviar that was decreed, but the revolution would start four months sooner.

It takes a man with a beard roughly six weeks longer to win a girl's heart than a man who has only a mere mustache.

Jogging may be a pleasurable sport and fine exercise in some ways, but some joggers themselves are getting to be quite a nuisance. Their friends have to take a full half day off work in order to attend their funerals.

Austria to open Jewish center

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austria probably won't close the Schoenau transit camp for emigrating Soviet Jews until other arrangements are made to move them through Austria, official Austrian sources report.

The camp, in a castle 70 miles south of Vienna, is continuing to process Jews bound for Israel despite Chancellor Bruno Kreisky's promise last Saturday to close it. The promise was made to two Arab gunmen who had taken three Russian Jews and an Austrian border guard hostage.

About 100 more Soviet Jews arrived in Vienna on Wednesday and were taken to the castle under heavy guard. They were expected to leave by Israeli airliner within 24 hours.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Neighbors in Houston lead a dog's life

DEAR ABBY: I do not approve of turning a .22 on a dog either, but I can understand why someone might.

What I can't understand is people who insist upon keeping large dogs in the city. They send their dogs (some large as ponies) to do their dirty jobs on neighbors' lawns. Loose dogs chase children and bicycles and threaten pedestrians. On the other hand, fenced-in dogs often spend the entire day barking. The owners are usually gone all day and don't believe it when they are told their dogs bark constantly.

Similarly, dogs kept outside at night go on a five-minute barking spree every few hours all night long.

One lady told me she wants her dog to bark at night because she likes the sound. Well, I don't!

R.G. IN HOUSTON

DEAR R.G.: Whether large dogs are kept in the city for protection, hunting, or as household pets, unless they are well trained and kept under control night and day, they are a public nuisance and, as such, should be carted off-with their owners-to Siberia.

DEAR ABBY: Like "Me" in Illinois, and the daughter who takes care of "grandma" who puts $200 a month in the bank, I took care of my stepfather for four years and paid for two of his trips to the hospital.

When he died I requested his heirs to honor our "out-of-pocket" expenses that were spent directly for him. (I had check stubs for verification.) They laughed at me.

I hired a lawyer, turned in a bill for his keep for four years, his hospital bill, and his funeral expenses. The lawyer got me twice what I had asked for, AFTER his percentage

I really loved my step father, and would have cared for him without compensation, but I had no love for his heirs who had turned him out when he came a chore.

Why don't people who care for those they love get a lawyer and collect what is due them?

ME TOO IN MISSOURI

DEAR ME: They may, after this hits print.

DEAR ABBY: About two months ago I bought a package of rice. I noticed small brown bits but thought they were just dark kernels of rice. Upon closer examination, I saw them move! When I returned the rice to the market, they looked at me as though they thought I had placed the bugs there!

Last week, when I opened a five-pound box of flour, I found more bugs!

This morning I started to make pancakes. In measuring the pancake flour, yes, more bugs! Really Abby, I am afraid to make anything made with wheat, flour, or even cereals. I wonder how long I may have been eating these bug-infested foods. I never was a finicky person who examined things under a microscope, but I am getting a phobia from all this. What kind of bugs are they? How can I find out? And how do I get rid of them?

BUGGED IN NEVADA

DEAR BUGGED: I wrote to the University of Nevada Entomology Department, College of Agriculture, Reno, and heard nothing from them. Then I phoned the University of Minnesota's Entomology Department where I was graciously told: "Have the lady send a sample of the bug to us. We'll indentify it and remedy her bug situation. "Minnesota, hats off to thee!

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1954, Italy and Yugoslavia formally settled their dispute over the city of Trieste.

On this date —

In 1503, Christopher Columbus discovered Costa Rica.

In 1880, the 21st American president, Chester A. Arthur, was born in Fairfield, Vt.

In 1881, artist Pablo Picasso was born in Malaga, Spain.

In 1918, as World War I neared the end, the Allies announced that the German Hindenburg line had been broken.

Ten years ago: A hurricane was battering Cuba after taking some 5,000 lives in Haiti.

Five years ago: A commission which had investigated a campus uprising at New York's Columbia University issued a strong indictment of the school's administration.

One year ago: President Nixon dismissed charges by Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern that the Nixon administration was the most corrupt and deceitful in American history.

Thought for today: I have never met a man who has given me as much trouble as myself. — Dwight L. Moody, American evangelist, 1837-1899.

The Birth of Eve

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam . . . and He took one of his ribs . . . and made He a woman . . . Genesis II: 21-22

After God had created Adam, He planted a garden "eastward in Eden"—a paradise of trees and flowers of great beauty. And to this garden he brought Adam and, later, all the beasts of the field and the birds of the air, to see what he would call them. Adam gave names to all these creatures and God was pleased. Then it was, according to the Bible, that the Lord said: "It is not good that the man should be alone" . . . so, putting Adam to sleep, He took one of his ribs and from it created Eve, the mother of all mankind. And, as the Lord gave her to Adam, he cried out: "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; and she shall be called Woman."

Bishop of Philippines to visit St. Andrew's

St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Highland Ave., will have the Rev. Benito C. Cabanhan, bishop of the Philippine Islands, as guest minister Sunday.

He will conduct morning prayer at 10 a.m., with the public invited. Holy Communion will be at 8 a.m.

Born in Bambanay, San Juan Province, the Rev. Mr. Cabanban was ordained a deacon in 1948 and became a priest in 1949. He was elected suffragan bishop in 1958 and was consecrated in 1959 as the first Filipino to sit in the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church.

In 1967 he became diocesan bishop, succeeding the last American bishop of the Philippine Episcopal Church. Rev. Mr. Cabanban was awarded the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Virginia and is presently chairman of the National Council of the Philippine Episcopal Church.

Madison Mills church members plan activities

MADISON MILLS — Members of Madison Mills United Methodist Church will be involved in a number of district activities Oct. 7-8.

At 2 p.m. Sunday, there will be a District Workshop for adult church school teachers at Christ United Methodist Church, Columbus. The workshop will last until approximately 8 p.m.

Also on Sunday a district - wide Youth Rally will be held at the Lancaster Campground. It will begin at 2 p.m., and there will be a carry-in dinner at 4:30 p.m.

On Monday, members will attend a district meeting for Interpretation of the Conference Ministries at Hilliard United Methodist Church, Columbus.

Suit filed on building maintenance

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Civil Service Employes Association filed a lawsuit Thursday to keep maintenance services in the new state office building from going to an outside agency.

In a taxpayer's suit, James F. Marshall, executive secretary of the OCSEA, claimed the $1,336,588-a-year contract granted by the Ohio Building Authority Sept. 4 violated the state constitution.

"They are trying to give away control of a building that belongs to the people," Marshall said. He called it a precedent that could destroy the civil service system in Ohio.

The contract for maintenance, security and mail room service for the 44-story building went to the 100 East Broad Corp., a private firm.

The building, which will have 41 floors of floor space, is to partially open next month.

Marshall said the constitution provides that employment for the state be by civil service rather than contracted out.

"If we allow the state to contract out maintenance of the state office building, are we to assume the Highway Patrol is the next agency to be staffed by the company with the most pull in the governor's office?" Marshall asked.

Marshall wants the court to keep the OBA from carrying out terms of the contract for the building at 30 E. Broad St. in downtown Columbus, across from the capitol.

Garnes elected to post

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — William E. Garnes, director of the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services, has been elected a director of the Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies.

Lecture series opens Sunday at McNair Church

The first of a series of lectures will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the McNair Presbyterian Church, according to the Rev. Wilbur Bullock.

The Rev. Mark Dove, pastor of the Grace United Methodist Church, will be the speaker Sunday. Rev. Bullock said four lectures will be held during the month of October.

Revival at Good Hope

GOOD HOPE — The Good Hope Baptist Church will hold revival services at 7:30 p.m. nightly Oct. 7-14. Special singing will be provided by the Christian Way Singers of Washington C.H. There will be guest ministers from the other Good Hope churches each evening.

Revival services slated

The Rose Avenue Wesleyan Church, 312 Rose Ave., will conduct revival services at 7:45 p.m. nightly Oct. 8-14. The Rev. Donald E. Howard, of Zanesville, will be the guest speaker.

ROYALTY TO REIGN — Mrs. Keith Berner (center), will reign as Princess of Phi Theta Gamma chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, at the annual Fall Festival Dance Oct. 13 from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m. in Mahan Hall. Herkie Coe and the Wellingtons will provide music for dancing. Tickets will be available at the door. Members of Mrs. Berner's court will be Miss Pam Starr (left), and Mrs. Roger McCoy (right.) Mrs. Berner will compete in Beta Sigma Phi's International Sweetheart contest in February.

New officers installed by Town and Country Club

Members of the Town and Country Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. John Stimpert, with Mrs. Charles Duff and Mrs. Jack Frost acting as hostesses.

The meeting was opened by the president Mrs. Alvin Armintrout and the secretary-treasurer's report given by Mrs. Richard Rankin. Mrs. Dwight Duff reported on the club's participation in the National Hunting and Fishing Day event held recently at the Fish and Game Lodge in which the garden clubs participated.

Mrs. Lee Cleland reported on the most recent Presidents' Council meeting which she and Mrs. Armintrout had attended.

The Regional Meeting to be held in Mahan Hall on October 30 was discussed and plans made for the club to provide four table arrangements for decorations and to handle the registration that day. Each club is to have a sales table at the all day meeting and ideas for items to sell were discussed.

The County Christmas Flower Show will be held December 3 in the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church. Mrs. Cleland discussed the show schedule and asked members to select the arrangement they wish to make.

Plans for the next meeting which will be the annual Fall Foliage Tour at the Rankin Cottage in Ross County were made. The all day outing will feature a covered dish luncheon at 12 noon and each member is asked to bring a covered dish and her own table service.

It was decided that the November through March meetings will begin at 7:30, rather than 8:00 p.m.

Following the business session, Mrs. Armintrout thanked the members for their cooperation during the past year. She then conducted an impressive installation ceremony for the incoming officers, who are: President - Mrs. Cleland; vice president - Mrs. Armintrout; secretary-treasurer - Mrs. Rankin; and publicity - Mrs. Dwight Duff. Each officer was presented a lovely corsage by the outgoing president.

Mrs. Stimpert then introduced her son Keith who had participated in the Americans Abroad program of the American Field Service last summer and had spent most of the summer months living with a family in Venezuela. Keith showed slides and told of his experiences as an exchange student and answered many questions from the group.

At the conclusion of the enjoyable program, refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Stimpert, to the members and Mrs. Medrith Mitchell, a guest.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Dwight Duff and will feature a demonstration on decoupage.

Zeta chapter members motor to Greenfield

Members submitted suggestions of themes for the 'Sweetheart Dance' which will be held at the American Legion Hall Feb. 16. Mrs. James Dunn is chairman.

Mrs. Frank Giacomini gave posters and tickets for the skating party Oct.25. Mrs. Pollard is winner of the ways and means gift.

"Self Estimate" was the title of the program presented by Mrs. Fred Pitzer. Mrs. Michael Riggilo was winner of the contest.

Mrs. Pollard, Mrs. Jim Coldiron and Mrs. Dale Lowe served refreshments. The next meeting will be a Pledge Ritual and Ritual of Jewels.

Those present were Mrs. Clary, Mrs. Roger Snyder, Mrs. Rick Kelley, Mrs. Jud Thompson, Mrs. Giacomini, Mrs. Riggilo, Mrs. Lowe, Mrs. Roger Pemberton, Mrs. Coldiron, Mrs. Ernie Gettelfinger, Mrs. Skip Hamilton, Mrs. Randy Miller, Mrs. Jim Bonham, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Pollard and Mrs. Pitzer.

Heat flaked cooked fish with cooked rice in a generous amout of butter. Garnish with sieved hard-cooked egg. Call the dish Kedgeree and serve for brunch.

---

Zip up mayonnaise by adding curry powder, a blend of many spices. Serve the curried mayonnaise on egg and lettuce salad.

Fall arrangements made at Alpha CCL meeting

"What is the Abundant Life?" was the devotions topic given by Mrs. Margaret Helfrich when members of the Alpha Child Conservation League met in the home of Mrs. Robert Minshall, 828 Briar Ave., Wednesday evening. Assisting her were Mrs. Helfrich, Mrs. Merrill Lynch and Mrs. Marie Trackett. Mrs. Allen McClung, president, conducted the meeting.

A representative from a local florist shop demonstrated how to make fall arrangements by using fruit and flowers.

The 53rd Ohio CCL Convention was announced for Oct. 10 and 11 in the Commodore Perry Motor Inn in Toledo. The theme this year is "Through the Eyes of a Child." The featured speaker is Dr. George W. Crane.

It was also announced that little gifts are needed for the Community Action Outread Program for the Elderly, held each Monday in First Presbyterian Church.

Other correspondence was read by various committee chairmen and committee reports were heard.

Mrs. Merrill Lynch will be hostess for the Nov. 7 meeting, with Mrs. William Fletcher and Mrs. George Naylor assisting. The finance committee will be in charge of the program.

Mrs. Charles Hurtt reported on the OCCL Federation meeting held Sept. 13 in the home of Mrs. Roger Rapp, of which she and Mrs. Robert W. Fries attended.

Pumpkin pie and coffee were served by the hostesses to Mrs. Fulton Alkire, Mrs. William Clarke, Mrs. Robert Climer, Mrs. Marcus Crago, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Harold Foster, Mrs. Fries, Mrs. Willard Greer, Mrs. Earl Hartley, Mrs. Hurtt, Mrs. Russell Liston, Mrs. R. B. McCoy, Mrs. McClung, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Minshall, Mrs. Naylor, Mrs. Clyde Palmer, Mrs. Paul Ream, Mrs. Richard Waters, Mrs. Frank Reno, Mrs. Wendell Whiteside and Mrs. Louise Little, a guest.

Twin Oaks Club to donate gifts

Twin Oaks Garden Club members met recently in the home of Mrs. Thomas Braden, president. Mrs. Willard Bonham gave the treasurer's report and Mrs. Braden read a letter from the Homemakers Outreach Program asking for small items for game prizes. The club voted to donate some of these items.

Mrs. Braden announced the Regional Meeting of Garden Clubs will be Oct. 30 in Mahan Hall. Reservations are to be in Oct. 24 and the registration fee will be $1.00 and the luncheon, $3.00. Mrs. William Summers is registration chairman. The theme will be "Christmas in October." She also reminded members that the fall flower show will be held in Washington C. H. Nov. 28.

The Twin Oaks members will be in charge of favors and name tags for the regional meeting, so the remaining time was spent making these.

Refreshments were served by the hostess to Mrs. Bonham, Mrs. Everett Baird, Mrs. Charles Blizzard, Mrs. Eugene Thompson, Mrs. Harold Bonecutter, Mrs. Dana Kellenberger, Mrs. Wilbur Hoppes and Mrs. Joe Bonham.

Mrs. Bonham will be hostess for the next meeting.

Browning Club program topic is 'Casa Guidi'

The Browning Club met in the home of Mrs. O.C. Jenkins. Mrs. Willard Bitzer, president, opened the meeting with the Club Collect and presided at the business session. She welcomed two guests: Mrs. James E. Nilan and Brenton C. Zimmerman, and three new members: Mrs. Everad Broberg, Mrs. E.F. Coberly and Mrs. Tranquillo Del Ponte.

Mrs. P.M. Cook read and commented on the poem, "Epilogue from Asolando," by Robert Browning.

Elsie Forman presented the program on Casa Guidi, the rooms in the apartment building, Palazzo Guidi, in Florence, Italy, where Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning occupied rooms on the floor above the ground floor for 14 years. While on a European tour this summer, she talked with Philip Kelley, executive secretary of the Browning Institute, Inc. and Mrs. Rena Kleefeld, treasurer of the Browning Institute, Inc.

These rooms were purchased in November, 1971, and plans are being made to restore the rooms and the furnishings as they were when occupied by the Brownings. The project will require contributions from organizations and friends and will extend over a period of many years.

Through the information from Philip Kelley, Mrs. Rena Kleefeld, and especially Mrs. Theodore S. Hope Jr., treasurer of the New York Browning Society, and the facts about each room which had been typed, framed, and placed on the walls, Miss Forman was able to give the latest plans for the restoration. Through the use of a large chart, pictures of the Brownings, the apartment building, the interior of the rooms, other items were displayed.

An architect-contractor, Nicholas Rucellai, who is either a grandson or a great grandson of a very close friend of Robert Browning, has been engaged to supervise the restoration. On August 2, another person had been interviewed who is planning to do the actual work of restoring.

In addition to the restoration of the Browning rooms, plans are being made to publish the letters of the Brownings which will consist probably of 35 volumes. Much information about the Brownings is being brought to light through these letters.

After the informative and interesting talk of her very recent visit to Casa Guidi, the officers of the Club served refreshments and the menbers enjoyed a social time.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At last count, 15 soap operas and 16 game shows were on the three TV networks on weekdays. But the familiar soap-and-games pattern could markedly change next season at CBS-TV.

Three half-hour daytime shows possibly may be replaced with a daily 90-minute effort bearing the all-purpose title of "CBS Daytime 90," according to B. Donald Grant, a top CBS executive.

But Grant, CBS' vice president for daytime program, emphasizes that such a move is by no means definite. He says it depends on how the network's current daytime shows hold up in the ratings this season.

However, he says his network probably will know by the end of November whether "CBS Daytime 90" will be ordered up as daily fare — or only once a month — for viewers during the 1974-75 season.

CBS' new daytime concept gets sort of a trial run next Thursday, when the network pre-empts "The Price is Right," "The Match Game" and "Secret Storm" for "Tiger on a Chain," a romantic melodrama about the homecoming of an Air Force pilot from a North Vietnamese prison camp.

It's the first of eight 90-minute daytime melodramas now planned. Grant says the seven others aren't scheduled yet, but CBS may show three more this season and the rest in summer and next fall.

If CBS goes the daily 90-minute route, he says, it probably would run similar melodramas on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Unlike soap operas, none of the shows will have continuing characters or stories.

Tuesdays and Thursdays probably would feature 90-minute series much like these on evening TV, each with a regular cast, he said.

Ohio Perspective

Gilligan looking to 1976 drive?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In open political warfare with the state's Democratic administration, John Glenn quotes a top aide of Gov. John J. Gilligan as saying the governor might not serve out a four-year term if re-elected in 1974.

The former astronaut said John Hansan, Gilligan's administrative assistant, told him recently that the governor wanted Glenn to run for lieutenant governor. This would give Gilligan more flexibility in 1976, Glenn quoted Hansan as saying.

"He stated that what I give the governor is flexibility in '76: to run for national office, to run for the Senate, take a position in a new administration and otherwise serve out his term as governor, which would end in 1978," Glenn said.

The governor's office said Hansan would have no comment.

Glenn also accused the governor and state party leaders of bossism and of attempting to rig a U.S. Senate endorsement for Howard Metzenbaum of Cleveland.

Glenn, who wants to run for the U.S. Senate, said he turned down the proposal to run for lieutenant governor. He later assailed Gilligan and the state party organization in a speech before the Ohio Democratic Executive Committee.

Gilligan refused to discuss Glenn's charges. He said he would have no comment until Glenn repeats the charges face to face.

Glenn said he still is considering making the Senate race even without the party's blessing.

A movement has been launched by some Democrats, mostly legislators, to have William Ensign removed as chairman of the Ohio Youth Commission.

A leader in the group told The Associated Press they were afraid the one-time Toledo mayor would be an embarrassment to Gov. John J. Gilligan in next year's election.

Democrats fear Republicans will blow the parties out of proportion in next year's campaign speeches.

Department of Transportation Director J. Phillip Richley said any secretaries in his department who manned telephones to take pledges during the Democratic National Committee's fund-raising telethon did so voluntarily.

He said if any supervisor promised the girls a day off for working for the party that night they did so without authority.

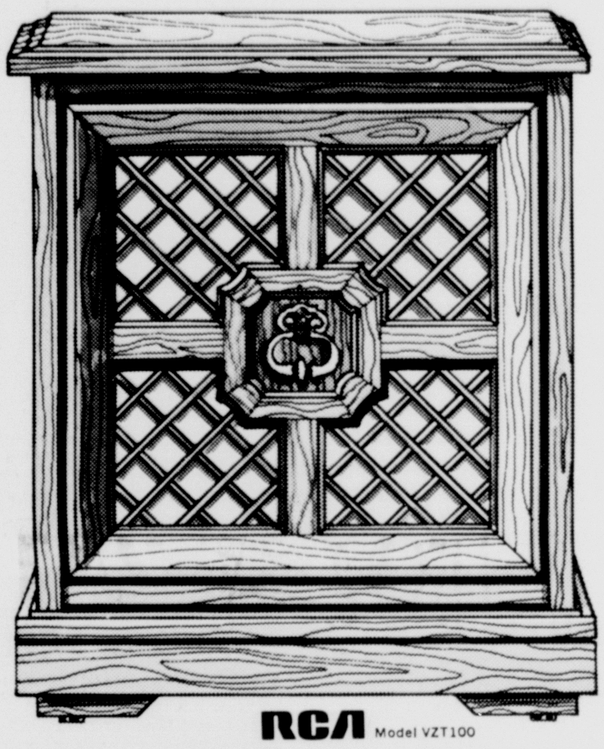

"It wasn't necessary," Richley said. "We had more volunteers than we could use."

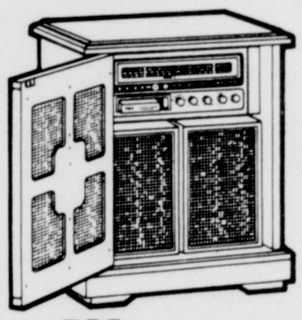

At least one DOT secretary said she was promised time off for helping out at the telethon. Richley said neither he nor Gov. John J. Gilligan would sanction such proposals.

Flying news

By Judy Dennis

Hi, again, friends!

It's been a busy two weeks for me, and I've been struggling to find time to gather my news. Our office manager at Ross County is on vacation, so I've been dividing my time between the two places.

Bill has been to New Mexico since my last article, flying there in our Cherokee. He was accompanied by John Woodmansee, Howard Wright and Tom Romph. They had expected to pick up a twin-engine Cessna and a single-engine Skyhawk. However the twin didn't come up to Bill's expectations so he purchased only the Skyhawk.

We held our annual Airport Picnic a week ago Sunday, with the best attendance ever. We had spot landing and "bombing" contests with 100 pilots, student pilots and their families enjoying the fun.

Millard French won both contests astonishing the on-lookers by setting the Cessna 150 right-ON the line as Millard flew a bomber during World War II.

After the contests were over, we all enjoyed a wiener roast and a sing-a-long around the campfire, accompanied by that accomplished banjo player Bob Woodmansee.

WE HAVE BEEN very busy the past two weeks spraying weeds in the farmers' beans. I saw the results of the spraying this afternoon when I accompanied Lloyd Anderson, one of the Ag pilots on an inpsection of a bean field on the Hazel Moyer farm. One corner was untouched due to surrounding farm buildings, but in the part that had been treated the weeds were dead.

We've had a little bad luck, the past week. On Thursday, some thieves broke into our Ross County Airport. Although they got very little for their trouble, as we don't leave cash overnight, still it was a nuisance getting the window replaced and straightening up.

Also I'm sorry to report extensive wind damage to the J-3 Cub owned by Eddie Pendergraft. The wing of Eddie's J-3 was nearly torn off during the storm Saturday night. The wind also bent a little rod on the wing of one of our trainers, grounding it for a day for repairs.

This made Sunday a little hectic, as we had to juggle students and planes in order to make up for the shortage of planes.

BOB WOODMANSEE has been very busy with his student cross-county flying, taking three cross-country flights in the past week.

John Woodmansee, and his wife Sandy, flew to a lake at Zanesville where they had a picnic lunch and Roy and Elizabeth Smith flew to Urbana for lunch.

Tex Guerra has been flying every evening it is fit, working on his Commercial license, and Tim Vehnekamp has been on two dual cross-county flights.

Howard Wright is working on his instrument rating and has about 12 hours towards the 45-hour minimum.

Walt Gooldin is getting close to flight test time and Jack Sanders has been working on the ground school films as well as his flying technique.

CONGRATULATIONS. are in order for Ned Payne, who made his first solo flight. Ray Valone and Gene Pfaff, coworkers for a construction firm have each been practicing landings - Ray with the instructor, and Gene solo. We've picked up another new student, and we're happy to welcome Bill Sever from Frankfort.

These old eyes are beginning to "give out" so I'll wrap up the news and say "So long for now".

Students turn from war to peace studies

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

For an increasing number of college students the study of peace has replaced the protest of war.

Today, 50 colleges and universities across the country offer major or minor programs in peace studies. Five years ago, at the height of the antiwar movement, only one school offered such courses.

At the University of Pennsylvania, students can obtain a doctorate in peace science. A year ago Colgate University established the first professorship of peace.

This fall, 300 campuses are using peace studies material, according to the Institute for World Order in New York City. Spokesmen said the institute receives some 250 inquiries per month from junior and senior high schools, which are also establishing courses of study.

"Our problem and excitement is that interest is growing so rapidly. It's been happening since about 1970," said Franklin Wallin, institute president.

Proponents of such studies don't discount the power of protest. They point to the Vietnam war and public opinion's role in the American withdrawal. But they are hopeful that the peace education movement will go beyond Vietnam.

The growing interest in peace studies stems in part from frustration of some who participated in the protests of the 1960s.

Joe Fahey, acting director of Manhattan College's Peace Studies Institute, said of protest in the 1960s:

"I realized that the problem of war was much deeper than the Vietnam war and protests were not enough to stop it. We decided to make peace our career."

Others see peace studies as part of a growing worldwide concern, building over the past few decades.

"These peace studies programs are part of a global, political and social movement. The bright, moral, pragmatic minds are coalescing. We may be at a moment in history where it's possible to abolish war," said Saul Mendlovitz, director of the World Order Models Project, an effort by teams of researchers around the globe to find better ways to live.

How does one study peace?

Courses vary greatly in subject matter, but most start with the premise that war is not inevitable, practical solutions can and must be found.

"The nature of the liberal arts program has been that war is an acceptible means of conflict resolution. It's become a predominant myth in society," said Chuck Appel, a 20-year-old senior at Manhattan College. "But you've got to teach that nonviolent resolution is the best way to solve problems."

The peace science approach is also interdisciplinary. One course may include math, history, government and psychology — in a rounded technique of problem-solving.

"In the past, sociology, economics, each had its own piecemeal approach. We felt the problem of world conflict requires a full attack," said Walter Isard, chairman of the peace science department at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Professors also stress that courses take a rigorous, unemotional look at world problems, and that facts and understanding — not rhetoric — are their tools.

Courses range from the University of Colorado's "Sociological Analysis of Revolution" to Harvard College's "History and Theory of Non-Violence."

Lalit Aggarwal, 29, the first candidate for a doctorate in peace science at Penn, is trying to develop a universally applicable framework for solving conflicts at all levels, urban to international.

As an architect and city planner, he felt solutions to urban disputes very inadequate.

"But it's not enough to just say, 'I don't like it.' One should be able to suggest a possible alternative. The program has helped me put my ideas in a more rigorous, precise form," said Aggarwal, who plans to work with an international agency when he completes his degree.

At Manhattan College some 17 courses with an emphasis on peace are offered in various departments. About 40 majors study such subjects as "War and Violence in Western Literature" and "Biology of Human Behavior."

The program is flourishing now on a campus with a strong ROTC contingent — and some radicals who grumbled when the peace major was established.

"The radicals thought we were too much a part of the establishment. We want to reform the system," said director Fahey. He added, however, that he doesn't discount civil disobedience, and teaches about Gandhi and Martin Luther King in his own course, "Religious Dimensions of Peace."

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At last count, 15 soap operas and 16 game shows were on the three TV networks on weekdays. But the familiar soap-and-games pattern could markedly change next season at CBS-TV.

Three half-hour daytime shows possibly may be replaced with a daily 90-minute effort bearing the all-purpose title of "CBS Daytime 90," according to B. Donald Grant, a top CBS executive.

But Grant, CBS' vice president for daytime program, emphasizes that such a move is by no means definite. He says it depends on how the network's current daytime shows hold up in the ratings this season.

However, he says his network probably will know by the end of November whether "CBS Daytime 90" will be ordered up as daily fare — or only once a month — for viewers during the 1974-75 season.

CBS' new daytime concept gets sort of a trial run next Thursday, when the network pre-empts "The Price is Right," "The Match Game" and "Secret Storm" for "Tiger on a Chain," a romantic melodrama about the homecoming of an Air Force pilot from a North Vietnamese prison camp.

It's the first of eight 90-minute daytime melodramas now planned. Grant says the seven others aren't scheduled yet, but CBS may show three more this season and the rest in summer and next fall.

If CBS goes the daily 90-minute route, he says, it probably would run similar melodramas on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Unlike soap operas, none of the shows will have continuing characters or stories.

Tuesdays and Thursdays probably would feature 90-minute series much like these on evening TV, each with a regular cast, he said.

Gilligan looking to 1976 drive?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In open political warfare with the state's Democratic administration, John Glenn quotes a top aide of Gov. John J. Gilligan as saying the governor might not serve out a four-year term if re-elected in 1974.

The former astronaut said John Hansan, Gilligan's administrative assistant, told him recently that the governor wanted Glenn to run for lieutenant governor. This would give Gilligan more flexibility in 1976, Glenn quoted Hansan as saying.

"He stated that what I give the governor is flexibility in '76: to run for national office, to run for the Senate, take a position in a new administration and otherwise serve out his term as governor, which would end in 1978," Glenn said.

The governor's office said Hansan would have no comment.

Glenn also accused the governor and state party leaders of bossism and of attempting to rig a U.S. Senate endorsement for Howard Metzenbaum of Cleveland.

Glenn, who wants to run for the U.S. Senate, said he turned down the proposal to run for lieutenant governor. He later assailed Gilligan and the state party organization in a speech before the Ohio Democratic Executive Committee.

Gilligan refused to discuss Glenn's charges. He said he would have no comment until Glenn repeats the charges face to face.

Glenn said he still is considering making the Senate race even without the party's blessing.

A movement has been launched by some Democrats, mostly legislators, to have William Ensign removed as chairman of the Ohio Youth Commission.

A leader in the group told The Associated Press they were afraid the one-time Toledo mayor would be an embarrassment to Gov. John J. Gilligan in next year's election.

Democrats fear Republicans will blow the parties out of proportion in next year's campaign speeches.

Department of Transportation Director J. Phillip Richley said any secretaries in his department who manned telephones to take pledges during the Democratic National Committee's fund-raising telethon did so voluntarily.

He said if any supervisor promised the girls a day off for working for the party that night they did so without authority.

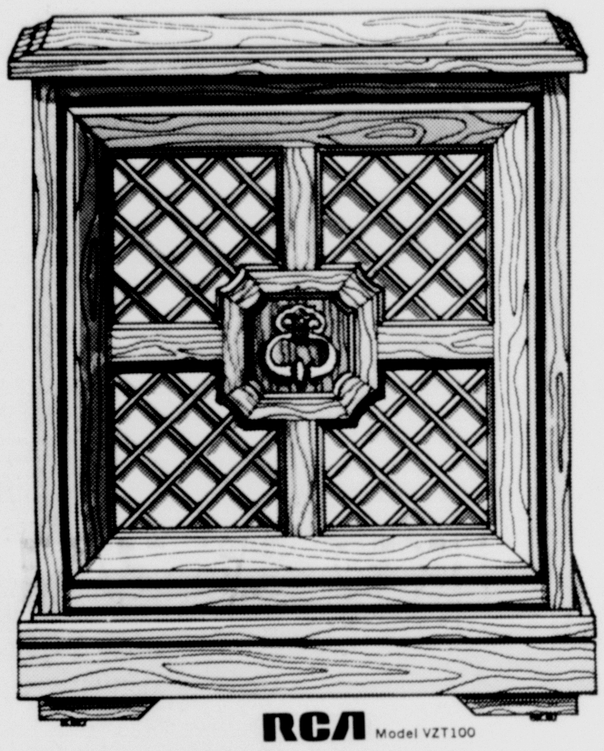

"It wasn't necessary," Richley said. "We had more volunteers than we could use."

At least one DOT secretary said she was promised time off for helping out at the telethon. Richley said neither he nor Gov. John J. Gilligan would sanction such proposals.

Flying news

By Judy Dennis

Hi, again, friends!

It's been a busy two weeks for me, and I've been struggling to find time to gather my news. Our office manager at Ross County is on vacation, so I've been dividing my time between the two places.

Bill has been to New Mexico since my last article, flying there in our Cherokee. He was accompanied by John Woodmansee, Howard Wright and Tom Romph. They had expected to pick up a twin-engine Cessna and a single-engine Skyhawk. However the twin didn't come up to Bill's expectations so he purchased only the Skyhawk.

We held our annual Airport Picnic a week ago Sunday, with the best attendance ever. We had spot landing and "bombing" contests with 100 pilots, student pilots and their families enjoying the fun.

Millard French won both contests astonishing the on-lookers by setting the Cessna 150 right-ON the line as Millard flew a bomber during World War II.

After the contests were over, we all enjoyed a wiener roast and a sing-a-long around the campfire, accompanied by that accomplished banjo player Bob Woodmansee.

WE HAVE BEEN very busy the past two weeks spraying weeds in the farmers' beans. I saw the results of the spraying this afternoon when I accompanied Lloyd Anderson, one of the Ag pilots on an inpsection of a bean field on the Hazel Moyer farm. One corner was untouched due to surrounding farm buildings, but in the part that had been treated the weeds were dead.

We've had a little bad luck, the past week. On Thursday, some thieves broke into our Ross County Airport. Although they got very little for their trouble, as we don't leave cash overnight, still it was a nuisance getting the window replaced and straightening up.

Also I'm sorry to report extensive wind damage to the J-3 Cub owned by Eddie Pendergraft. The wing of Eddie's J-3 was nearly torn off during the storm Saturday night. The wind also bent a little rod on the wing of one of our trainers, grounding it for a day for repairs.

This made Sunday a little hectic, as we had to juggle students and planes in order to make up for the shortage of planes.

BOB WOODMANSEE has been very busy with his student cross-county flying, taking three cross-country flights in the past week.

John Woodmansee, and his wife Sandy, flew to a lake at Zanesville where they had a picnic lunch and Roy and Elizabeth Smith flew to Urbana for lunch.

Tex Guerra has been flying every evening it is fit, working on his Commercial license, and Tim Vehnekamp has been on two dual cross-county flights.

Howard Wright is working on his instrument rating and has about 12 hours towards the 45-hour minimum.

Walt Gooldin is getting close to flight test time and Jack Sanders has been working on the ground school films as well as his flying technique.

CONGRATULATIONS. are in order for Ned Payne, who made his first solo flight. Ray Valone and Gene Pfaff, coworkers for a construction firm have each been practicing landings - Ray with the instructor, and Gene solo. We've picked up another new student, and we're happy to welcome Bill Sever from Frankfort.

These old eyes are beginning to "give out" so I'll wrap up the news and say "So long for now".

Students turn from war to peace studies

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

For an increasing number of college students the study of peace has replaced the protest of war.

Today, 50 colleges and universities across the country offer major or minor programs in peace studies. Five years ago, at the height of the antiwar movement, only one school offered such courses.

At the University of Pennsylvania, students can obtain a doctorate in peace science. A year ago Colgate University established the first professorship of peace.

This fall, 300 campuses are using peace studies material, according to the Institute for World Order in New York City. Spokesmen said the institute receives some 250 inquiries per month from junior and senior high schools, which are also establishing courses of study.

"Our problem and excitement is that interest is growing so rapidly. It's been happening since about 1970," said Franklin Wallin, institute president.

Proponents of such studies don't discount the power of protest. They point to the Vietnam war and public opinion's role in the American withdrawal. But they are hopeful that the peace education movement will go beyond Vietnam.

The growing interest in peace studies stems in part from frustration of some who participated in the protests of the 1960s.

Joe Fahey, acting director of Manhattan College's Peace Studies Institute, said of protest in the 1960s:

"I realized that the problem of war was much deeper than the Vietnam war and protests were not enough to stop it. We decided to make peace our career."

Others see peace studies as part of a growing worldwide concern, building over the past few decades.

"These peace studies programs are part of a global, political and social movement. The bright, moral, pragmatic minds are coalescing. We may be at a moment in history where it's possible to abolish war," said Saul Mendlovitz, director of the World Order Models Project, an effort by teams of researchers around the globe to find better ways to live.

How does one study peace?

Courses vary greatly in subject matter, but most start with the premise that war is not inevitable, practical solutions can and must be found.

"The nature of the liberal arts program has been that war is an acceptible means of conflict resolution. It's become a predominant myth in society," said Chuck Appel, a 20-year-old senior at Manhattan College. "But you've got to teach that nonviolent resolution is the best way to solve problems."

The peace science approach is also interdisciplinary. One course may include math, history, government and psychology — in a rounded technique of problem-solving.

"In the past, sociology, economics, each had its own piecemeal approach. We felt the problem of world conflict requires a full attack," said Walter Isard, chairman of the peace science department at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Professors also stress that courses take a rigorous, unemotional look at world problems, and that facts and understanding — not rhetoric — are their tools.

Courses range from the University of Colorado's "Sociological Analysis of Revolution" to Harvard College's "History and Theory of Non-Violence."

Lalit Aggarwal, 29, the first candidate for a doctorate in peace science at Penn, is trying to develop a universally applicable framework for solving conflicts at all levels, urban to international.

As an architect and city planner, he felt solutions to urban disputes very inadequate.

"But it's not enough to just say, 'I don't like it.' One should be able to suggest a possible alternative. The program has helped me put my ideas in a more rigorous, precise form," said Aggarwal, who plans to work with an international agency when he completes his degree.

At Manhattan College some 17 courses with an emphasis on peace are offered in various departments. About 40 majors study such subjects as "War and Violence in Western Literature" and "Biology of Human Behavior."

The program is flourishing now on a campus with a strong ROTC contingent — and some radicals who grumbled when the peace major was established.

"The radicals thought we were too much a part of the establishment. We want to reform the system," said director Fahey. He added, however, that he doesn't discount civil disobedience, and teaches about Gandhi and Martin Luther King in his own course, "Religious Dimensions of Peace."

Cambodian refugee tide swelling

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — That part of Cambodia still under government control is on its way to becoming a vast refugee camp.

The statistics tell you that: more than a million Cambodians — one in every seven — displaced by the war and in need of help, barely a corner of the country left untouched by the human uprooting.

You see it in any direction you travel: families trudging along the sides of highways, their property shrunken to what they can pile onto the twowheeled, cattle-drawn carts.

People, most of them farmers living in small villages, flee their homes in the face of rebel attacks or when their homegrounds become battlegrounds between insurgent and government forces.

They don't go farther than they have to, but often that means long treks to Phnom Penh or distant provincial capitals where handouts or jobs are more readily available and the prospects for safety greater.

Some return to their homes only to be driven out again. Others become refugees whose status one American aid official described as "temporary on an indefinite basis."

"When they flee from their villages, they carry some of the family valuables. They sell them and can live on that for one or two months perhaps," says Loeung Nal, the minister for refugees. "After that, they have nothing and somebody must take care of them. The longer the war lasts the greater the problem becomes."

The minister admitted the government cannot now meet the needs of the refugees or solve the mammoth economic, social and political problems arising from a population oneseventh adrift.

This year, the government has set aside a fraction of one per cent of planned national expenditures for refugee care. It comes to $124,000, or about 12 cents a refugee a year.

Government efforts thus far have focused on rice distribution and housing for refugees in the Phnom Penh area, leaving most problems of the provinces in the hands of local authorities.

"We can only hope to provide enough so that they will not die," Nal said.

As with guns and butter, the Cambodian government relies on the United States and other countries for large infusions of aid for its refugee program.

The U.S. government has budgeted $4 million in such aid for Cambodia this fiscal year but one embassy official said, "We don't want to set up a vast aid apparatus like we had in Vietnam."

Jeff PTC makes plans for Fall Festival

JEFFERSONVILLE — The Jeffersonville Parent-Teacher Club has approved a $25 contribution to the campaign for the $2,036,000 bond issue proposal for a Miami Trace District middle school which will come to a vote at the Nov. 6 election.

The action was taken from Kenneth Payton and Marvin DeMent, of the school board, and Phil Grover had explained the need for new construction. Mrs. Phyllis Richards, a county Health Department nurse, also appealed to the PTC for its support of the .2-mill public health levy, also up for decision by the voters.

Mrs. Danny Snyder, general chairman, announced the committee heads for the Fall Festival at the school Oct. 27: Mrs. Wayne Rayburn, games and prizes; Mrs. Larry Garringer, kitchen; Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Sams, additional games and prizes; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Steen country store; Mrs. Eddie McBee, cake and doll walk; Mrs. Gordon McCarty, turkey tickets; Mr. and Mrs. Geore Renick, candy; Mr. and Mrs. Dick Robinson, baby pictures; and the first and second grade teachers, selection of "Mr. and Mrs. Fall Festival."

Mrs. Douglas Stayrook, the music teacher, thanked the PTC for the new piano, and Terry Richards expressed appreciation for the new lockers for the boys rest rooms.

Mrs. June Slaughter, Miami Trace District elementary school coordinator, reported on progress being made on the "Volunteers for Reachout" program and asked mothers to give an hour a week to help at the schools.

Following the business session, a program was presented by the first and second grade pupils under the direction of their teachers.

Doughnuts and cider were served after the program by Mr. and Mrs. Joe King and Mrs. Wilmah Lower.

The next meeting will be Nov. 5 when third and fourth grade students will present the program and a film on "Mulligan Stew" will be shown. On the refreshments committee are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spears and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Geer.

Spring farm problems proving 'blessing' to elevator operators

By HOWARD HARPER

There's an old saying that, in effect, "one man's meat may be another man's poison" — vice versa.

Last spring Fayette County's grain farmers had their problems. They were plagued by rains, which first delayed planting and then, after the seed was in the ground and had sprouted, more rains filled hundreds of acres of low ground with miniature lakes, which drowned the young soybean and corn plants.

It was a discouraging predicament for the farmers, but they finally saw their grain on well drained fields come through, although it had taken weeks beyond the normal sowing date to get the seed planted and, thus, spread the planting over many weeks. While the grain in some fields was well up, the seed was not yet even in the ground in others.

NOW the farmers' early trials and tribulations may be a blessing for the elevator operators.

Had the corn and soybeans come along normally, the two harvests, at about the same time, it could have poured grain into the elevators faster than the operators could get freight cars to haul it away to the terminal elevators.

But with the harvest being spread out over many weeks, elevator operators are having no serious shipping problems — yet. But they are keeping their fingers crossed. They say they understand the railroads don't have a surplus of cars and why they are not delivered until long after they have been ordered—sometimes as long as a month or more. But, they take comfort from the rain-delayed planting that has resulted in lengthening the harvest and the need for many more railroad cars in a shorter period. One operator said "we'll be getting soybeans in until after frost, and some corn will be coming in after Christmas." Normally, the harvest of the two crops would be virtually completed within a few weeks.

THEY POINT OUT, for example, that some fields of soybeans (and corn, too) have been harvested, while across the fence in the next field both crops are still green and far from mature.

No accurate figures on the soybean or corn acreage in the county are available at the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office here, but some educated guesses are that there are around 70,000 acres of soybeans and that the average yield will be around 30 to 35 bushels per acre. (The average was cut by the hundreds of acres drowned out last spring.) This would mean that the elevators would have had to handle, under normal conditions, more than 2,000,000 bushels of soybeans in a short harvest period. The same condition applies, in a general way, to corn also.

THERE CAN be no doubt that more soybeans were planted in Fayette County this year than ever before; and it's the same across the country. This has come about, economists say, because of a growing demand, both for export and for new uses for soybeans. In view of this increased demand, soybean prices skyrocketed to a peak of little more than $11.00 a bushel last summer. But since then they have dropped to around $5.75 this week, still not bad and considerably more than a year ago.

The soybean acreage was increased partly at the expense of corn and to an overall increase in crop acreage but the corn market is holding up fairly well at around $2.15 a bushel.

On the brighter side, prospects for bumper yields are good for both where the grain was not drowned out or stunted by abnormal spring rains.

False report brings fine

A Washington C. H. man, arrested for reporting false information to a police officer, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 90 days in jail by Acting Municipal Judge John P. Case Thursday.

A Bloomingburg youth was found guilty of possession of marijuana, and another man was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 60 days for larceny.

John Forsha Jr., 42, of 123 Oak St., voluntarily came to the Police Department during the investigation of a grand larceny last week and gave a statement. Further investigation into the matter disclosed that his statement had been false and had been intended to cover his own involvement in the incident. He was then arrested and charged. Judge Case suspended the jail term pending good behavior for two years.

Lawrence L. Hagler, 19, Bloomingburg, was fined $250 and costs and was given a suspended 30-day jail term for possession of marijuana. He was arrested by sheriff's deputies when he was seen drinking alcoholic beverage in an automobile, for which he was fined another $25 and costs. While making the arrest, the officer found a package of marijuana in the car.

Judge Case suspended 44 days of a 60-day jail term handed down to Eldon L. Wilson, 21, of 108 E. Market St., for the theft of $42 from the Waters Supply Co., 1206 S. Fayette St. In addition to the jail term Wilson, who was apprehended by sheriff's deputies Wednesday, was fined $100 and costs.

Henry C. Mongold, 1013 Willard St., was fined $50 and costs for dumping trash in the area of Paint Creek. He was arrested on a warrant signed by Jerry F. Cremeans, area wildlife agent.

Kennel Club plans winter puppy match

BLOOMINGBURG — Reports on the weekly obedience classes and preparations for the winter puppy match were discussed at the October meeting of the Paint Valley Kennel Club at a potluck supper held Thursday night in the Bloomingburg Town Hall.

Robert Schneider, president of the Paint Valley Kennel Club, said reports were heard on the successful obedience training classes held each Monday at the Fairground for the past 10 weeks. He said 25 dogs have been enrolled and six more obedience classes are scheduled.

Plans for the January puppy match, an event open to purebred dogs, were discussed.

Trees and shrubs defoliated by leaf-eating caterpillars two or three years in succession die or are seriously weakened.

Traffic Court

Three persons arrested for driving without operator's licenses were found guilty in Municipal Court Thursday afternoon with acting Municipal Judge P. Case presiding. Each of those charged was cited for another violation as well.

Ann M. Avelo, 22, Bloomingburg, was fined a total of $250 and costs and was sentenced to 30 days in jail when she was found guilty of driving while intoxicated and without an operator's license. Twenty days of the jail term were suspended pending good behavior for one year.

Ronnie J. Duncan was fined $150 and costs for driving without an operator's license and reckless operation. He received a suspended 30-day jail sentence.

Jerry W. Harper, 24, of 610½ Washington Ave., was fined $200 and costs for displaying fictitious license plates and driving without an operator's license.

Eight persons forfeited bond when they failed to appear.

What Do All Front Pages Have In Common?

News.

Each news story on the front page contains as many facts about an event as space and time allow.

Inside your newspaper you'll find other news stories about usually less important matters. But they're written with the same dedication to accuracy and objectivity.

Read all of the news. It will keep you informed and help you be a better citizen.

Your newspaper.

It's yours. Use it for you.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

The arrival of a ninth grandchild recently called for another appearance at a hospital with camera in hand. It was a joyous occasion, one to be recorded in pictures for the family albums.

By now, incidentally, we have separate grandchildren albums, an exclusive domain for their pictorial activities.

I had no problem taking pictures on the maternity ward. The newborn babies were safe behind the glassed-in windows and all picture taking was done by natural light and without flash.

The safety-glass window, by the way, had a wire screen pattern in it but by pressing the camera lens against the glass, it disappears entirely and only the scene beyond is seen.

The brightly lit nursery permitted an exposure of 1-60th second at f6.3 on fast black-and-white film. Color pictures by available light were also possible though I didn't take any.

FORTUNATELY, our newest granddaughter's crib was next to the window so use of a normal 50 mm lens produced a bit enough image. By luck, an aide was attending to the baby when I started shooting and she cooperatively held her up for a better view.

I recall a previous blessed event in which the baby's crib was farhter away and it required a 135mm telephoto lens to get a viewable grandchild picture.

To round out a picture story of the event, I also focused on our daughter in her room reading congratulatory cards, arranging the flowers, admiring her daughter through the nursery window and surrounded by family visitors.

The camera was also a witness when father brought mother and baby home from the hospital and the new one met her older sister and brother. A final photo in the "blessed event" sequence was of the new baby asleep in her own crib at home..... looking tinier than ever.

A baby's birth is such a happy occasion and so picture worthy that it's hard to realize that some hospitals do not permit cameras or picture taking by parents or visitors.

I BECAME AWARE of it some grandchildren ago and it shocked me.

When a hospital guard stopped me at the visitors' entrance and said my quite visible camera was not allowed, I asked to see someone in authority.

I was taken to the head nurse and asked her why I couldn't take my new grandson's picture.

"It's a rule of this hospital," she replied.

"As you see, I have no flash," I pointed out. "I'm aware that flash might present a problem in a hospital. But I plan to shoot only by natural light from behind a plate glass window. All types of visitors are allowed to look at the babies and there is no contact of any kind, so why can't I photograph what I can see?

"Aside from the baby, I'm permitted to visit my daughter and can hug and kiss her. Then why can't I take a picture of her? It isn't an invasion of privacy because she wants and has asked for photos of this special event. Taking pictures doesn't endanger the health or well-being of either mother or baby. And it doesn't interfere in any way with hsopital routine or a nurse's duties. So why isn't photography allowed?"

"I can only repeat," the head nurse said, "It's a hospital rule!"

SINCE NO justification for the rule was given, on leaving the nurse's office I continued up to the maternity ward..... but the camera was carried inconspicuously.

I took my daughter's picture in her room. Then she walked me to the nursery window where she acted as a shield while I photographer her first-born son. When I visited again, the camera was in a gift box, out of sight of the guard.

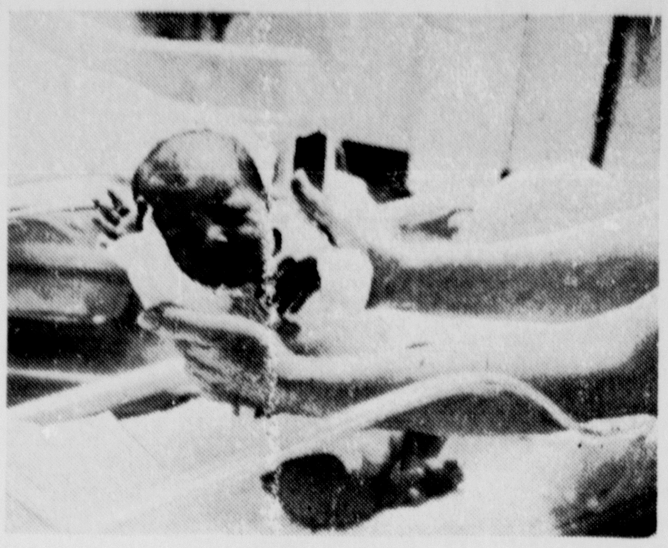

I took other photos but I deeply resented having to do so surreptitiously. I felt there was no justification or explanation for this attempt to abridge my freedom to photograph a momentous event in the life of a loved one.

The following day, there was a possible explanation for the hospital rule. My daughter was given a proof of a photograph of her baby along with an order blank from the "official photographer" connected with the hospital.

IT LEADS ONE to guess that the hospital rule forbidding cameras was to protect a financial arrangement with a commercial photographer by eliminating any possible competition from parents..... or grandparents.

I'm happy to report that after two such experiences, my daughters found hospitals that not only had excellent medical maternity facilities but were pictorially enlightened, photographically speaking.

Hospitals should know that our blessed events are matters of public record but they also deserve a place in the permanent archives of family albums.

"HI GRANDPA! Go ahead and take the picture—this hospital doesn't mind." A blessed event is a happy one that should be photographed and preserved in the family archives. Here's one-day-old Ali Lorin G[illegible] being held up by a cooperative nurse's aide to make a better picture.

Little boy fights throat tumors

MIDDLESBORO, Ky. (AP)— Jimmy Weaver is a happy little fellow, like most 2-year-olds. But unlike most, he needs a throat operation every month to stay alive.

His mother, Angela Weaver of Middlesboro, recalls that Jimmy had no apparent problem until he was about four months old, when he began to lose his voice. Soon he was unable to cry audibly.

Treatments with antibiotics were ineffective.

Five months later, Dr. Albert Cullum of Middlesboro operated on Jimmy's throat. He found and removed some viral tumors about the size of small warts that were blocking Jimmy's breathing passage.

But the tumors, or papilloma, began to grow back, and Jimmy's body apparently didn't offer normal resistance to them.

Nine months later, in December 1972, Jimmy needed a second operation to remove the growths, and the need accelerated.

Jimmy has since had the papilloma removed 13 times, three times by Dr. Cullum and 10 times, with a laser beam, by Dr. Stewart Strong at Boston University Hospital.

During the last two months, an operation was needed about every 10 days. The last operation, by Dr. Cullum, was an emergency procedure.

At that time, Jimmy was fitted with an artificial silver trachea, a tube running from the front of his neck into his throat. The tube has reduced the operations to about one a month.

Mrs. Weaver must watch Jimmy 24 hours a day, and clear the tube at least four times a day. She tells of waking up many times to find her child struggling for air, a shattering experience for both.

Despite all this, she says, "He's happy and healthy, and he plays pretty well." The most disturbing thing for Jimmy, she adds, is being unable to speak.

The doctors hope the laser treatments at Boston will slow the growths, Mrs. Weaver says. But so far they haven't, and monthly operations must continue until the tumors stop growing.

Blasts level Irondale school; probe underway

IRONDALE, Ohio (AP)— There was no school today for 210 elementary school students here whose 51-year-old classroom building was leveled by a series of mysterious explosions and a fire Thursday.

Irondale school officials said they were looking for suitable classroom space in order to hold school elsewhere Monday.

Fire officials said they still were investigating the cause of the explosions, which shook the building early Thursday morning. Firemen said no one was injured. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

A newer, adjoining building suffered smoke and water damage but survived the fire, firemen said. The fire and explosions occurred in a portion of the older building used to store supplies.

Hear testimony in Hoffman case

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—A state ballistics expert told the first-degree murder trial of Howard Thomas Hoffman III Thursday that Hoffman's parents were killed by bullets fired from a gun once owned by their son.

The prosecution rested its case shortly after the testimony, and Lucas County Common Pleas Court Judge immediately recessed the 14-day proceedings until Tuesday.

The prosecution's decision to end its case came abruptly and was unexpected. Only 77 of the 191 witnesses subpoened had testified.

Compromise seen unlikely on reforms

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. John J. Gilligan said Thursday he saw no hopes for a compromise in a committee studying campaign reforms, but he believes the full legislature in a special session can come up with a good law.

Republicans and Democrats divided evenly Wednesday night over corporate and union political contributions. Republicans want to let union members designate which party or candidate their political contributions will go to.

Gilligan, in Toledo, said there is no comparison between corporate and union contributions.

"We want to discourage the fat cats and keep the fast money boys out of the field," he said. "We want to encourage all citizens to contribute a dollar or two or five or 10 to the political process to keep it running."

The 14-member Legislative Service Commission Committee, evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats, was trying to come up with a proposal to put before the special session Oct. 23.

Don't start removing the finish from an old piece of furniture unless you have made up your mind that it's likely to be a messy chore.

Once in a great while, when a wooden object has a single coat of varnish or paint on it, the finish can be taken off quickly and easily with one of the wipe on-wipe off types of removers. Most of the time, however, the old finish is made up of many coats, applied at different times over the years, or a series of three coats applied on a single occasion.

Either way, the removal job is almost certain to be arduous, involving applying the remover, scraping it off and, in some cases, using a bleach to restore the wood to its natural color.

Troublesome as it is, the removal of an old finish can be very satisfying, revealing the beauty of the wood and the chance to refinish it as you wish. When the new, usually clear finish is put on, the result more often than not is good enough to inspire you to tackle a similar job on another piece of furniture.

But when you are in the middle of the project, you're likely to have some qualms about having started it in the first place.

Varnish remover (or paint remover; it's the same thing) is put on with a brush, applied generously with full-flowing strokes. Use more of the flat of the brush than the tips of the bristles.

The container will tell you how long to wait for the particular brand you are using. It's usually between 15 minutes and half an hour.

AFTER the waiting period, take a putty knife and scrape a small portion of the surface. If the old finish, which will have become bubbly and wrinkled, can be scraped off fairly easily, go ahead with the rest of the surface.

If there is too much resistance and you are able to remove only a little of the finish, it means that the remover has not penetrated deeply enough or that more remover is required.

Wait another 10 minutes, then test again. If it is still evident that the finish is not coming off, apply another coat of the remover right over the first one. Wait the required time period, then begin scraping again.

Always hold the putty knife so that the blade is almost horizontal. If held vertically, there is a chance that the blade will take off part of the wood as well as the finish.

DESPITE your work and your patience, you may find at the conclusion of the scraping that some color still remains in the wood.

Steel wool or sand the surface and see if that does any good. If not, it is necessary to use a commercial bleach unless you plan to finish the surface with paint rather than a clear finish. If the wood is to be painted, the traces of remaining color will not affect the result.

Since both the remover and the bleach are chemicals, wear gloves when using them.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THE FEATURE of this waterfront home is the third bedroom-suitable for renting for housing winter guests. There is a complete bathroom facility, two closets and the access is unrelated to the access to the main bedrooms. Another feature of this retirement house is the living-dining area visually separate from the kitchen. The kitchen does share the general air space of the living-dining room. The kitchen also has a round skydome. This is an all-masonry house reasonably safe against hurricanes; the wide eaves of the shed roof protect the windows from excessive summer sun. Plan HA799R has 1,080 square feet and was designed by Jan Reiner, 1000 52nd St. North, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33710. Anyone interested in learning the cost of the blueprint can write to the architect, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Labor dispute long and bitter

NEW HAVEN, W.Va. (AP) — A strike at Appalachian Power Co.'s Philip Sporn plant in this Ohio River community seems a throwback to the days when fierce labor struggles were commonplace in West Virginia.

The more than three-month dispute has been the occasion for beatings, bullets, accusations and the detonation of a bomb at the plant.

On July 1, 216 members of Utility Workers Union of America Local 426 walked off their jobs at the facility, which produces power for northern Mason County.

Union members struck at generating plants on both sides of the Ohio all the way north to Wheeling when the UWUA's two-year contract expired.

"We had 5,000 men on strike," said Local 426 President Carl Searls. "We only got strike benefits for two weeks and that was just $10 a week for each man."

"Since then," he said, "some of the families are living on food stamps and some of the men and their wives have gone out and got part time jobs to keep food on the table and shoes on the children."

Since the strike began, the Mason County Sheriff's office has handled dozens of complaints of cable cutting and auto stonings at the Sporn plant, and several power blackouts were attributed to sabotage of electrical equipment.

Philip Sporn officials have offered $35,000 awards for information leading to the conviction of persons involved in the violence, hired independent security guards and warned workers that if they were replaced they would not be given back their jobs after a settlement is reached.

"They say they've hired 14 new employes," said Searls, "but it's obvious they're just trying to break the union. They're trying to starve us out."

Last week, the action got so heavy that Mason County Circuit Court Judge James Thompson found both sides in contempt of court and ordered them to stop harassing each other.

The long, bitter struggle adds a new dimension next week with the addition of a federal mediator.

Man uses bread for art forms

He's crafted museum-piece jewelry out of pretzels, created bleeding loaves of bread and asked 1,200 people to saw, hammer, throw and eat their way through two tons of bread.

"Dough is like flesh. It's extremely sensual to play with. Baking is a turn-on beyond belief," said Fischer.

There's nothing new about using food as an art object. Creation of wedding cakes is a deepgrained American folk art.

Fischer has stuck with bread and it's far from a put-on. His works have commanded as much as $3,000. He began 13 years ago with prebaked loaves, attaching handles to make "portable" bread.

"Part of the interest was in putting the bread in a different context and changing its function completely," said Fischer, who was born in Belgium and influenced by surrealists there.

He moved into extravaganzas in the 1960s—like baking a solid 100-foot loaf, running it through an open-ended oven on a conveyer belt in San Antonio, Tex.

His latest effort is a series of large sculptures which will be on exhibit at the New York Cultural Center this week. Among them are rich-brown textured pieces of a man's torso, hands and legs.

He'll also be on hand for an outdoor baking festival in New York's Central Park on Saturday to celebrate the fourth annual National Day of Bread.

"Bread is hard outside and soft inside, like people. It's always been symbolic," said Fischer.

In his current exhibit, a huge pair of legs, baked around wire mesh, are priced at $3,000. If cast in bronze, they are $5,000. The hands, encased in plexiglass boxes, are $1,000. His "Monument," a tall, fat bunch of loaves strapped together, is $2,500.

Bluegrass lawns generally stay green longest in autumn. Bluegrass does not suffer from light freezes and in most parts of the country only the leaf tips singe until after Christmas.

Few turfs are hardier and more self-reliant than Kentucky Bluegrass, or combinations of bluegrass and fine fescue.

Bluegrass blends planted in autumn grow very well because of warm soil, good air temperature and moisture balance. Bluegrass seedings are best sowed into a loosened soilbed.

The tiny seeds sift into crevices between soil particles. A "pebbled" surface accommodates seed well and accepts rain or watering better than does a dusty surface.

For new seedlings, to protect the soil and retard evaporation, mulch with a thin layer of clean straw, wood chips, woven netting or an excelsior mat. A damp seedbed plus bright autumn days make bluegrass mixtures sprout quickly. Generally, you won't have to remove the mulch. It will gradually decay where it is.

New fertilizer requirements go along with the new fine fescues, bluegrasses and bentgrasses that are changing lawn complexions.

The breeding programs that provided the new varieties were conducted under conditions of sufficient fertility to encourage good color and year-round growth.

Most bentgrasses, including Highland, and newer bluegrasses such as Fylking, Merion, Pennstar and Prato, should be fed more liberally than older varieties.

For mimimal care lawns,,the experts advise natural Kentucky bluegrass or traditional varieties such as Arboretum, Kenblue and Park. Fine fescues such as Chewings, Highlight, Illahee, Penlawn and Ruby also are enduring. They like balanced feeding but not excessive nitrogen in hot weather.

We suggest giving your lawn a feeding in September, another in October or a double dose in between. Normal recommendations on the fertilizer bag run from about 1 pound of nitrogen to each 1,000 feet (3 pounds of a fertilizer containing 33 per cent nitrogen).

The grass will thicken and be ready for a fast spring start. If you feed liberally in autumn, spring feeding can wait until the early growth surge passes.

Fescues are popular, used often in bluegrass blends to provide durable cover under difficult conditions. Fescue helps out in the shade under trees, where the soil dries out and where fertility is poor.

Pennlawn (from Pennsylvania State University) comes from disease-resistant parent stock. It is well adapted to the East.

A European creeping fescue is Ruby; Wintergreen from Michigan State; Jamestown, resistant to salt, from Rhode Island, and Dawson, and Dawson, Koket and Sceempter from Europe.

Senate recess wouldn't delay adjournment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leaders say a two-week recess of the Senate planned for later this month will not delay congressional adjournment.

They moved the target for ending the session of Congress back two weeks, to mid-November. However, the Senate Democrats said Wednesday, the latest delay is because the House doesn't expect to complete work on the massive defense appropriations bill until early next month.

The House will stay in session, and so will, leaders of both houses hope, the Senate-House conference committees seeking to reconcile key money bills that must be passed before adjournment.

School lunch plan set

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill tying increased federal support for school lunches too rising food costs has been worked out by Senate and House conferees.

The bill would increase the federal share for each school lunch from eight to 10 cents. It also would double the number of children eligible for reduced-price lunches by changing income requirements.

The compromise reached Tuesday requires that the federal share would be raised automatically if the cost of restaurant food rises. The increase would be figured every six months, beginning Jan. 1.

The measure, which now goes to the House and Senate for final consideration, would raise the federal share of the program by about $230 million, not including the escalator clause.

The program, which includes breakfasts in some schools, free milk and other nutrition aids, cost the federal government $1.5 billion last year. Poor children are provided lunches at reduced prices and the poorest receive free meals.

Q. — I intend to make a chopping board for the kitchen in our house. What kind of wood should I use?

A. — Maple.

Q. — I will be in the market soon for a radial arm saw. Can you tell me what they cost?

A. — The range is very wide — from about $100 to $400, depending on several factors, including the size of the blade. The simplest way to find out is to go shopping in several different stores.

Q. — There is a white film on about a dozen bricks on one side of our house. What is it and how can it be removed?

A. — It's called efflorescence. It's a salt deposit which is brought to the surface by water.

Scrub the stains with a wire brush. Sometimes this will do the trick. If it doesn't, scrub with a solution of muriatic acid. This is a strong chemical and must be used with great care and while wearing rubber gloves.

Since the salt is washed out with water, find out how the water is getting into the masonry. Check for loose mortar especially.

It might also be that excessive moisture inside the house is getting behind the exterior walls and causing the trouble. This is very likely if the wall which is stained is in the area of the kitchen or bathroom.

Q. — Can I install resilient floor tiles over old ones? Do I use the same adhesive as I did when I put down the original tiels seven years ago?

A. — Yes to both questions. It is important that the old tiles be securely attached, since if any of them become loose, the new tiles will be dislodged.

Also, remember that the new installation will raise the level of the floor. You may have to plane or sand off the bottom of one or more doors so they can be closed easily.

Q. — I am putting a new veneer top on a dining room table. After I took off the old split top, I found the surface covered with dried-up old glue. I have scrubbed and scraped it without getting off more than half of it. Any ideas?

A. — Old glue can often be softened with diluted household vinegar. Scrape as soon as the glue begins to soften. If you wait too long it will harden again.

Reds brace for NL playoff series

Billingham meets Seaver in Saturday's lidlifter

CINCINNATI (AP) — Heavy rains washed out a scheduled Cincinnati Reds practice Thursday, leaving the defending National League champs in a combative mood as they awaited the New York Mets and the league playoffs.

"Let's get it on," roared little Joe Morgan. "I'm tired of everybody asking us how we feel about facing the Mets. I think people ought to ask the Mets how they feel about playing us. We're the team that won 99 games."

"We ain't scared of nobody," added Morgan, testily.

The National League playoffs, a best-of-5 affair between the Western Division champion Reds and the Eastern Division winning Mets, open Saturday at 4 p.m.

"They've got the momentum is what I hear," said Rose, mostly for the benefit of Morgan's ears.

"That's all I've been hearing lately," said Morgan. "Let's get it on and then we'll see."

"If they've got so much momentum, they don't need the practice," needled Rose.

"I'm not Jean Dixon. I don't predict things — I just make things happen," said the Reds leftfielder who has assured himself of a third National League batting title with a .338.

The Reds, who fashioned baseball's best record — 99-63 — with a remarkable closing rush that produced 60 victoriew in the last 86 games, defeated the Mets in eight of 12 meetings.

New York, like Cincinnati, had to come from an 11-game deficit to claim its division title. Hobbled by injuries much of the way, the Mets surged back by winning 24 of their last 34 games.

"If we get moved to that division next year, it will be no contest," said Perez, who completed his best season with a .312 batting average and 101 runs batted in.

The Mets arrived late Thursday night and were scheduled to practice from 5 to 7 p.m.

The threat of showers diminished today. The forecast for Saturday promised sunny weather, according to the Weather Bureau.

Grid prophet picks Browns over Cincy

Counted out as championship contenders in many preseason estimates, the Vikings and Cowboys each have put together three straight victories and head into the fourth weekend of the 1973 National Football League season as two of the four unbeaten and untied teams. The others are the Pittsburgh Steelers and the surprising Los Angeles Rams.

The downfall of both the Vikings and the Cowboys, so the preseason guessing went, would come from aging defensive units—Dallas' Doomsday Defense and the Vikings' Purple Gang.

Dallas has yielded 30 points in three games, Minnesota 32.

The Vikings face the Detroit Lions, a team that Minnesota has mangled the last 10 times the two met, on Sunday. The Cowboys play the Washington Redskins in the Monday night television game. Both Minnesota and Dallas are on the road.

Will these two teams play like they've been playing...or like they were expected to before the season started?

Before attempting to answer these and other pressing questions, let's quietly whisper that last week's Fearless Forecast was a lousy seven right, six wrong. That dropped the average to .703 with a 26-112 showing.

Minnesota (3-0) at Detroit (11-1) — The Vikings are favored to make it 11 straight over the Lions. But all good things must come to an end sometimes, so...LIONS 24, VIKINGS 21.

San Diego (1-2) at Pittsburgh (3-0) — The Steelers' defense against scoring, best in the American Conference, has given up seven fewer points than the Cowboys, best in the NFC. No wonder the Chargers are 18-point underdogs. Who can argue with that spread. STEELERS 30, CHARGERS 10.

Los Angeles (3-0) at Houston (0-3) — Can you think of any reason why it won't be 4-0 and 0-4 after this Sunday, even if Sid Gillman, the Houston general manager, is helping out with the Oiler offense? RAMS 42, OILERS 21.

Cincinnati (2-1) at Cleveland (2-1) — Cleveland's offense hasn't scored a touchdown in nine quarters but Don Cockroft's field goals gave the Browns a victory last week. The Bengals are having problems, too. In this bitter Ohio rivalry all but one of the games have been decided by four points or less. Cleveland is at home, because of the baseball playoffs, so...BROWNS 24, BENGALS 21.

New York Jets (1-2) at Miami (2-1) — Another game switched because of the baseball playoffs. It might have been interesting if Broadway Joe was playing. Bob Griese and Company by about any margin they want. DOLPHINS 35, JETS 20.

Denver (1-2) at Kansas City (2-1) — Don't count Kansas City out. That was the warning the Chiefs gave Oakland last week. The Broncos, meanwhile, had seven turnovers against the Bears. CHIEFS 31, BRONCOS 24.

Philadelphia (0-2-1) at Buffalo (2-1) — Look who's tied for first place in the AFC East with the Miami Dolphins. Buffalo, that's who. The Bills should still be there after this Sunday. BILLS 17, EAGLES 13.

Baltimore (1-2) at New England (0-3) — Some people might say it would be an upset if either team wins. Baltimore's new coach, Howard Schnellenberger, got his first victory last week. New England's new coach, Chuck Fairbanks, won't get his this week, unless he can sneak in his old Oklahoma team. COLTS 20, PATRIOTS 17.

Dallas (3-0) at Washington (21) — The Cowboys haven't forgotten that 26-3 pasting they got from Washington in the NFC championship game last year. But it's time for the Redskins to get into high gear and Duane Thomas has a score to settle with the Cowboys. REDSKINS 20, COWBOYS 18.

Lion frosh absorb third loss in row

The Washington C. H. freshman football team dropped its third game in as many outings Thursday evening, losing to the Greenfield Tigers by a margin of 30-0.

Even though the Lions defensive team hasn't been that bad, the offense has only been able to score only twice in three games. The frosh seem to move the ball well except when facing third down and long yardage. The off-tackle plays that gain the Lions most of their yardage cannot pick up the necessary first down when in a long yardage situation.

Greenfield started off its scoring spree for the first half in the first quarter. The Tigers threw in a triple reverse, ending in a pass for a touchdown. The play developed into a wide-open pass when the Lions defense failed to pick up the last boy that handled the pigskin. The extras were also made and Greenfield led 8-0.

WHEN THE Lions took over possession and failed to move the ball they were forced to punt. But, the punt skidded off the foot of the kicker and fell very short of the intended destination. The Tiger receiver caught the ball with a wide open path in front of him and scampered for the touchdown. The extras were again made and Greenfield led 16-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Again, when the Lions regained the football, they failed to make any kind of threat and were forced to turn the ball back over to their opponents.

This time Greenfield found another opening in the Lions secondary and completed a touchdown pass of over 40 yards. The extra point attempt failed, but Greenfield led at half 22-0.

The third quarter remained very calm with both teams exchanging the football but no points being put on the scoreboard.

The fourth quarter was also quiet until Greenfield scored on a short pass over the middle against the Lions' second team. The extras failed.

Washington C. H. coach John Skinner reported that the defense looked good against the run, but couldn't plug up the holes against the pass. Coach Skinner also stated that the offensive blocking was poor which kept the Lion runners in tight all evening preventing the big breakaway play.

Washington C. H., now 0-3 on the season, will entertain the Wilmington freshman at 4:30 p.m. next Thursday at Gardner Park.

Mike Phipps field jaunts worrisome

CLEVELAND (AP) — When the quarterback runs with the ball it usually excites the crowd and worries the coach.

Cleveland Browns fans have been doing a lot of cheering and Coach Nick Skorich has been doing a lot of worrying.

"Mike (Phipps) has been taking more chances than I would like him to take," Skorich said. "I keep encouraging him not to run. Sometimes he has no choice, but I'm trying to talk him into throwing the ball more."

In the opening day game victory over the Baltimore Colts Phipps was the leading ground gainer for the Browns with 55 yards in seven carries.

Last Sunday against the New York Giants he carried the ball six times for 27 yards.

"My running is not part of the game plan," the 25-year-old quarterback said. "But sometimes I feel like our receivers are covered or I'm getting pressure from the sides so I run.

Stan Walters lost to Cincinnati Bengals

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals offensive team suffered a setback Thursday when tackle Stan Walters was hospitalized with what is believed to be hepatitis.

"He's undergoing tests," said Coach Paul Brown. "They are concerned about hepatitis, and he is definitely out of this week's game."

Logan Brooks wins Lebanon feature

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Logan Brooks, in his first victory in 34 outings, took the featured claiming pace mile in the seventh race at Lebanon Thursday night to pay $6.40, $3.40 and $2.40.

Georgana Leway placed, paying $6 and $2.80 and Split Ticket was third for $2.80. The winning time was 2:09 4-5.

Women golfers feted

Mrs. Carl Mason, the 1973 Washington Country Club champion, was honored and awards were also presented to Mrs. Max Lawrence and Latricia Robinson, who tied for runnerup honors.

First flight champion Mrs. Ralph Bray and Mrs. Richard Wintringham, the runnerup were honored along with handicap champion Mrs. Donald Moore and Mrs. William Wead, the runnerup. Mrs. Walter Oswald was the first flight champion in the handicap tournament and Mrs. Roland Holthouse was the runnerup.

THE TEAM of Mrs. Robert Heiny, Mrs. John Aills, Mrs. Phil Morrow, Mrs. Wintringham, Mrs. Oswald and captain Mrs. Wead was honored for capturing the Friday League championship.

Miss Robinson had the best league average and Mrs. Holthouse took the best competitor trophy. Mrs. Roger Miller was the most improved league golfer.

This year's officers were Mrs. Otis Hess, chairman; Mrs. Heiny, vice-chairman; Mrs. Bonnie Schneider, secretary, and Mrs. Jack Kellough, treasurer. The 1974 officers are Mrs. Heiny, chairman, and Mrs. Schneider, vice-chairman.

Mrs. Oswald will be chairman of the Friday golf league, Mrs. Bray will head the championship tournament and Mrs. Donald Anderson and Mrs. Robert Sanderson will be chairman of the handicap tourney.

Mrs. Robert Hagerty was responsible for decorations at Thursday's banquet and club pro Tony Capuana and Mrs. Arthur Terry were presented special awards.

Lions, MT face winless teams

'Cane, Circleville clash in SCOL feature tonight

Although the smoke is just beginning to clear from the starter's gun, one game into tonight's South Central Ohio League football action will have a bearing on the eventual outcome of the 46th pennant chase.

Defending champion Circleville and Wilmington will collide in theSCOL feature attraction tonight and both will be hoping to keep pace with the heavily-favored Washington C.H. Blue Lions.

IT APPEARS that a feast or famine situation is boiling in the SCOL this year with the top-ranked Washington C.H. team being the only one of the seven members showing an unblemished record. Three of the teams have two losses apiece and three others are winless.

Circleville and Wilmington will be matching identical 1-0 league records in tonight's headliner and a loss at this stage in the season could prove almost disastrous for either the Tigers or Hurryin' Hurricane if they figure to be seriously considered when the SCOL sourvenirs are doled out later this fall. Circleville and Wilmington also have identical 2-2 all-games records.

Miami Trace, idle in SCOL play a week ago, will be launching its league schedule against a winless Hillsboro team at 8 p.m. tonight at Richards Memorial Field.

While the Panthers were completing preparations for the SCOL season last week, head coach Mike Doyle's Indians were dropping a 42-6 decision to Wilmington.

Doyle, who succeeded Dale Ambos as the Hillsboro taskmaster this season, will have an added incentive in tonight's contest since he is a graduate of Miami Trace.

However, the Panthers have lost only one SCOL game in a span stretching back to the beginning of the 1971 campaign. Incidentally, the Panthers, who will be entertaining Circleville next Friday, are unbeaten against SCOL teams at Miami Trace Field. Also, it was Circleville which handed Miami Trace its last SCOL loss.

MEANWHILE, Washington C.H.'s Blue Lions, ranked atop both the Associated Press and United Press International Class AA polls this week, will be looking for the fifth consecutive win when they meet a winless Greenfield team tonight at McClain Field.

The Lions are riding the crest of a four-game winning streak and have shutout all four opponents, Greenfield would probably consider it a moral victory just to score on the stubborn Washington C.H. defense.

Washington C.H. is 1-0 in the SCOL after walloping a weak Madison Plains team last Friday. Greenfield, suffering a painful four-game nosedive, dropped a 21-6 verdict to Circleville in last week's league debut.

Elsewhere, Madison Plains will be playing state-ranked Jonathan Alder in a non-league game tonight. The Golden Eagles will be hoping to improve a 0-4 all-games mark and pad the SCOL's record of 7-15 against non-league opponents.

Wilson expands lead in SCOL point race

Washington C.H. tailback Chuck Wilson has expanded his lead in the South Central Ohio League scoring race, according to statistics compiled today.

The hard-running Wilson, who is bidding for his second straight SCOL scoring championship, has stacked up a total of 58 points in the Blue Lions' four victories.

Wilson leads the SCOL scorers by a comfortable 28-point margin. He led by 22 points a week ago. Wilson has scored nine touchdowns and two sets of extra points for the 58-point total heading into tonight's game at Greenfield.

FAYETTE Countians are continuing to rule the scoring race as they have done in past seasons. Five of the top seven scoring leaders are either from Washington C.H. or Miami Trace.

Circleville's Eddy Richter and Jackie Watson, the Wilmington speed demon are tied for second place with 30 points apiece. Larry Howell, the Washington C.H.'s all-purpose player, holds down the third place spot with 22 points and Miami Trace quarterback Tom Riley is next in line with 21 points.

Johnson leader in college rushing

NEW YORK (AP) — Widener halfback Billy Johnson, last year's national college division champion in rushing, scoring and punt returns, is off to a fast start in his bid to repeat— at least in two of those categories.

The 5-foot-9, 180-pound junior galloped for 171 yards last Saturday in Widener's season opener against Western Maryland and leads the nation in rushing, according to the weekly statistics released by the National Collegiate Sports Services today.

Bengals, Cowboys win MT grid loop openers

The Miami Trace junior football league opened play Thursday evening at Miami Trace Field with the Bengals and Cowboys posting wins.

The Jeffersonville Bengals outlasted the Browns by a score of 14-8, while in the second contest the Cowboys popped the Rams by a score of 50-0.

With the first quarter getting under way, below threatening skies, the Bengals were the first to score. Halfback DeMent scored on a 25-yard run around left end. David Glass scored the extras and the Bengals led 8-0.

THE BROWNS failed to score on their possession and turned the ball back over to the Bengals.

This time Glass ran for a 30-yard touchdown. The extra point attempt failed and the score was 14-0.

In the second period, Eyre, for the Browns, tossed a 25-yard pass from the halfback slot to Hennesey. Hennesey then took the ball in for the score from the one-yard line on the next play. The extra point attempt was made by a pass from Riley to Eyre and the score was 14-8.

With the first half coming to an end down came the showers with the lightning increasing, the game was postponed for about 45 minutes.

When the second half got under way, on a rain-sopped field, neither team could move the ball and the final score remained at 14-8.

The Cowboys started out the scoring in the first quarter when Kevin Anderson took the ball over from the three-yard line. The extras failed and the Cowboys had their first six points.

The second touchdown came on a 48-yard pass to Bill Hanners from Art Schlichter. Again the extras failed, but the Cowboys still held the lead at 12-0.

Still in the first quarter the Cowboys scored another time. This time Dean Farris scampered around the end for 42 yards and the touchdown. The extras were scored on a pass to Chris Garland from Schlichter and after the first quarter the Cowboys led 20-0.

Starting out the second quarter the Cowboys hadn't slowed down the pace from the first stanza as Schlichter scored on an 80-yard run around the right end. The extras were good and the Cowboys led 28-0.

STILL IN the second quarter, Schlichter again scored. This time from the four-yard line. The extra points were scored on a pass to Riley from Schlichter and the Cowboys led at half 36-0.

The third period was again meaningless for the Rams offensively, but the defense only gave up one touchdown this quarter. That one coming on a 40-yard pass to Hanners from Schlichter. The extras failed but the Cowboys still had a commanding lead.

In the fourth quarter, Schlichter again passed for a touchdown, this time connecting with Farris for 24-yards. The extras were good on a pass to Anderson from Schlichter and the final score was 50-0.

Cowboy head coach Sonny Walters said he was pleased with offense and the defense. Coach Walters singled out the playing of Ralph Fast and Dennis Combs on the defensive unit, and of course, Schlichter on the offense along with many others.

All four teams will again meet on the Miami Trace Field next Thursday starting at 4:30 p.m.

Lakes season extension set

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)— Ore shippers on the Great Lakes plan to push Old Man Winter to the breaking point again this season, the Lake Carriers Association's Ice Committee said in a meeting here.

Committee members said at least 32 iron ore carriers, representing eight American fleets, would run at least into early January. And U.S. Steel Corp. said it intends to operate nine of its vessels on into February.

A strong demand for iron ore this year apparently contributed to the decision, although the ice committee has been stalling winter a little longer each year recently.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

When not sure, don't act! Wait till the facts are all in, and KNOW what they stand for. Situations could deceive if you are not alert.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Warning signals are up where behavior and disposition are concerned! Without realizing it, you could be too quick to prescribe or criticize — with unhappy results.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

A conservative and prudent attitude will keep you from going overboard through misguided enthusiasm -- a tendency now.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

Though yours is not usually a passive nature, you COULD place yourself behind the front lines now through modesty. Do a little acceptable tooting of your own horn.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Avoid a present tendency toward lethargy. Gear efforts to achieve objectives more quickly. Improvise occasionally. This day can be a helpful challenge.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

You can make headway in most matters, but some concessions may be obligatory. Do not take on new ventures without thorough investigation. This is no day for acting blindly.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Express your ideas and opinions discreetly but firmly. Don't leave stones unturned which may have gems beneath. A generally good day — if you cooperate.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

Some new events in the making, perhaps a new contact. Give rein to your liveliest hopes now. Do not antogaonize those who are really well disposed toward you.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

As with many others, you will get into difficulty if you speak or act in haste now. Stick to high principles, but avoid dissension, antoagonism.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Note early that this will be on of those "give and take" days, with emphasis on the giving. The artistic, the extra trimming, the light touch can brighten all things.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

A good time to develop a dormant talent, to repeat an old strategy when others fail. Don't yield to frustration in ANY situation. Keep your eyes on a golden future.

YOU BORN TODAY are highly imaginative, productive and gregarious; are outstandingly fair-minded and have a fine sense of balance and proportion. You work with others capably, but are inclined to be "bossy" at times. In fact, your tendency to criticize too harshly could alienate persons who, otherwise, could be most helpful in advancing your interests. Try to curb this trait. Highly versatile, you could excel in music, painting, the theater or, along entirely different lines, as inventor, statesman, jurist or physician.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH

The 1973 pair of U.S. Christmas postage stamps is in keeping with recent tradition — one or a religious nature and the other of whimsical design. The two 8-centers will be issued simultaneously on Nov. 7 in Washington D.C. at the National Gallery of Art.

The nonreligious adhesive features an old-fashioned Christmas tree and is the first U.S. stamp ever designed in needlepoint. The design was by Dolli Tingle.

Both are vertical and of commemorative size. A print order of one billion indicates how many stamps are expected to be sold.

First-day cancellation requests may be sent to "Christmas Stamp, Postmaster, Washington D.C. 20013." On the upper right corner of the enclosed envelope, pencil lightly which stamp you desire. Combinations may be ordered.

Requests with proper remittance (8 cents per stamp in money order or certified check only) must be postmarked no later than Nov. 7.

THE NETHERLANDS and Surinam have issued similar stamps to honor Queen Juliana on the 25th anniversary of her accession to the Dutch throne.

A portrait of the Queen taken by Prince Claus, her son-in-law, forms the central design on each of the silver jubilee commemoratives. The Dutch 40-center has a vertical orange bar on the right side which represents the Royal House of Orange.

The Surinam 30-cent stamp has a horizontal bar across the top which includes an ellipse with five stars symbolizing the different population groups in this country, formerly Dutch Guiana.

NEW ZEALAND'S Christmas stamps will have a religious theme.

The lowest value bears the Tempi Madonna by Raphael now in a museum in Munich, West Germany. The middle value illustrates a stained glass window showing the Three Kings from St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Auckland.

The highes value depicts a family entering a church. Snow and winter scenes are not common to New Zealand Christmas designs because Dec. 25 is in the middle of its summer.

2 Jackson Five singers charged

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — Two members of the Jackson Five rock group have been arraigned on charges of receiving stolen property from burglaries of 50 San Fernando Valley apartments.

John P. Jackson, 22, is accused on one count of receiving stolen property and his brother "Tito," 19, is charged in two counts. A third defendant, Sanders Bracy, 24, was arraigned on four counts of receiving stolen property and eight counts of burglary.

Reporter set to test shield law

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — A reporter for the Newark Advocate has been ordered to turn over Friday to a Licking County Court information she gathered in an investigative reporting assignment.

William Rogers, The Advocate's managing editor, said the reporter, Mary H. Hargrove, would appear in court but would testify the notes are property of The Advocate Printing Co.

Mrs. Hargrove will not reveal the confidential sources of her stories, Rogers said.

The notes were subpoenaed by David Pheils, operator of a water and sewer system in the nearby Forest Hills subdivision of Heath. Mrs. Hargrove wrote about problems in the subdivision in a series of 28 investigative articles.

Trial is scheduled for Oct. 15 to determine the ownership of the water and sewer system.

Rogers said the subpoena "just asked for everything," including notes which were not subsequently used as story material.

He said the notes now are in his possession.

Transit subsidies measure passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a bill to provide $400 million in government subsidies next year to ailing urban mass transit systems, but the measure faces a possible presidential veto.

A veto was predicted Wednesday by House Republican Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan as a coalition of big-city congressmen steered the bill to a narrow 219-195 passage.

Ford said a veto was assured if the bill goes to President Nixon in the form it left the House. A similar proposal has already passed the Senate.

Farmers Discovered Digitalis

My father takes digitalis for his heart. At school we learned that this drug was not discovered by scientists, but by farmers. I thought it would be an interesting question to ask you about.

Karen R., Calif.

Dear Karen:

It is a most interesting question because the story of the origin of digitalis is so fascinating.

Digitalis is probably one of the best-known drugs used for the treatment of chronic heart failure. This was once known as "dropsy" because fluid tends to accumulate in the body tissues when the heart is not functioning correctly.

The value of the drug is that it strengthens the heart muscle so that it can carry out its normal pumping action.

For hundreds of years the foxglove plant was used in tribal areas and by people in the farm countries. As has happened very often in the history of medicine, many drugs have evolved in a similar way, by trial and error.

As far back as the 14th century, there are records of this valuable plant with its lifegiving ingredient, digitalis.

After a simple operation for the removal of my appendix I developed adhesions. These gave me more trouble than the appendicitis itself. Does this mean I will be prone to adhesions if I should ever have another operation?

Miss W.O., Ky.

Dear Miss O.:

Adhesions are bands of thin but strong tissue that sometimes form after surgery.

When an operation is performed in the abdomen, the intestines must be handled with extreme delicacy to avoid irritating them and stimulating the formation of adhesions.

Actually, adhesions are nature's protective device. If there is a pocket of infection, adhesions are formed to seal off the infection and keep it from spreading.

Sumptoms due to adhesions occur only when the adhesions interfere with the normal function of the intestines.

Sometimes it is necessary to reopen the abdomen to free troublesome bands of adhesions.

The surgical techniques in use today, the extra precautions, drugs and enzymes greatly reduce the frequency of postoperative adhesions.

I do not believe that you should be further concerned about adhesions.

I can't convince my employers that air conditioning makes me sick. They think it's all in my head.

Mr. J.G., S.C.

Dear Mr. G.:

Many people, like you, are made uncomfortable by air conditioning. Some insist that they catch cold; others say they are "allergic" to the cold air.

I suggest that you make every effort to avoid direct exposure.

Girls kidnapped to beat doweries

SIVAS, Eastern Turkey (AP) — The province of Sivas has broken the Turkish record for the kidnapping of young girls, reports say.

In the first seven months of 1973 alone, 211 girls and young women, between the ages of 16 and 25, have been abducted.

Abduction is a traditional part of the marriage system in Turkey, and many of the kidnappings are little more than elopements. Of the 211 girls abducted all but 53 ended up marrying their kidnappers.

Local officials blame the increase in kidnappings on the increased dowries brides are fetching. Inflation has brought the usual sum to 20,000 liras — about $1,300.

Girls being admitted to military school

BOONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — The Kemper Military Academy here will admit girls this fall for the first time since the Civil War, school officials have announced.

The coed enrollment will be limited to 30 this fall. The school expects about 1,000 boys.

Girls were accepted during the Civil War when the war depleted the male enrollment. The school opened in 1844.

Trouble looming for area college

In 1971, the Ohio Board of Regents and Vice Chancellor Dr. Max J. Lerner proposed a master plan to aid and upgrade higher education in Ohio. Now, there's trouble.

The development of the board's proposed state General and Technical College in a six-county district in Southern Ohio would provide for a comprehensive post-high school educational program within commuting distance of all area citizens, offering: an equivalent to the first two years of a traditional baccalaureate program, an array of two-year technical educational programs designed to prepare students for direct entry into paraprofessional occupations, and various courses for adults for personal development and upgrading of work skills.

The counties in Southwest Ohio which the plan would serve are: Hamilton, Clermont, Fayette, Highland, Brown and Clinton.

The problem lies in location; for in these counties are: the University of Cincinnati's Walters, Clermont, and Tri-County branches; Scioto Technical; the Portsmouth and Chillicothe branches of Ohio University; Clark Technical; Sinclair Community; Miami University's Middletown and Hamilton branches; Cincinnati Technical, and two other CU branches, the Ohio College of Applied Science and University College.

DR. WARREN BENNIS, president of the University of Cincinnati has issued a statement concerning the university's position regarding the Board of Regent's higher education plans.

He is worried with enrollment down all over the state, and that the Board of Regent's plan, if instituted, would hurt the University of Cincinnati and its branches even more.

At the same time, Dr. Bennis has requested permission from the Board of Regents to establish another branch of UC known as Tri-County and another technical college at the Clinton County Air Force Base.

The Board of Regents has never officially created the Tri-County branch of UC, but the board did officially permit the university to spend part of its capital appropriation to purchase a site for the branch.

Chapter 3358 of the Ohio Revised Code enables state universities and-or technical colleges to reorganize as State General and Technical Colleges. These are to be governed by nine trustees appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Senate.

These institutions may offer general studies, technical education and adult education programs which are financed by state tax subsidies and student fees without reliance on a local property tax.

The Code also indicates that State General and Technical Colleges can only occur following a resolution passed by the Board of Trustees at the University of Cincinnati.

Dr. Bennis, statement reaffirms "the university is most anxious to cooperate fully with the Ohio Board of Regents toward the goal of expanding and improving higher education opportunities for the citizens of Southwestern Ohio" but, he doesn't want repetition by the Board of Regent's State General and Technical College plan in counties where the branches of UC are doing the exact same thing.

Extinguishers demonstrated

The Washington C.H. Fire Department demonstrated fire extinguisher techniques in the back parking lot of Fayette Memorial Hospital.

Carey W. Rinehart, plant service director and safety chairman at the hospital, arranged the demonstration in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 7-13.

Volunteers from the audience of 74 were given a chance to develop their skills in extinguishing fires.

The demonstration was made possible by the Washington C.H. Fire Department and the Fire and Safety Equipment Co.

BIE Day plans discussed

Preliminary plans for the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce's Business - Industry - Education (BIE) Day program for students at Washington Senior and Miami Trace high schools were discussed at a meeting of the Chamber's Education Committee Thursday.

Ron Warner, education committee chairman, said different approaches to the BIE Day program are being explored. He said the committee will survey sophomores at both high schools in an attempt to obtain information on the different jobs they would like represented.

In the past, the education committee has selected the different representatives for the program. Also in the past, the BIE Day program has been presented to high school seniors. The committee felt that by the time of the BIE Day program, most of the graduating seniors have already decided upon their future.

The committee indicated the BIE Day program would be presented earlier in the year, but no dates were set.

A committee to lay groundwork for the program was named. Members are John Lachat, the Chamber's board representative, Bruce Galloway, chairman of last year's program, Mrs. Roberta Bowers, James Vess, Principal Fred Jones, of Washington Senior High School, Principal Curtis Fleisher, of Miami Trace High School, and Warner.

Thunderstorm dampens WCH

A noisy, lightning-laced thunderstorm apparently caused few troubles for Washington C. H. utility companies Thursday night.

The bad weather, which started late Thursday afternoon with a heavy drizzle, dumped .38 of inch of precipitation on Washington C. H., according to official weather observer Coyt A. Stookey.

George Winkle, of the Dayton Power and Light Co., in Washington C.H., reported only a few power outages around the Washington C. H. area. Winkle said lightning hit a transformer and branch lines near Greenfield, causing scattered outages.

No problems were reported by Bruce Galloway, commercial manager at Ohio Bell here. Galloway said Ohio Bell experienced some troubles late Wednesday afternoon when a carrier located near Harrisburg was damaged by lightning, but he said service was restored by 10 a.m. Thursday to the few customers that were affected.

The rains hit Wilmington a little harder than Washington C. H. Thursday as the Clinton County city received .66 of an inch.

County draws relief money

Fayette County received $6,036.21 in general relief subsidy money during the month of September, according to Joseph T. Ferguson, state auditor.

A total of $8,737,766.94 was distributed to Ohio's 88 counties through the state-financed subsidy program for the purpose of partially defraying administrative and general relief costs of the individual county welfare operations. It is in addition to federal-state financed assistance programs such as Aid for Dependent Children, Aged, Disabled and Blind.

Distribution to other neighboring counties included: Clinton, $15,643.89; Greene, $113,196.38; Highland, $23,861.30; Madison, $5,469.22; Pickaway, $13,803.35, and Ross, $30,876.85.

The size of the September distribution ranged from $819.09 in Putnam County to $2,616,867.45 in Cuyahoga County. Montgomery County received $968,868.60.

Jeff Council adjourns; fails to muster quorum

JEFFERSONVILLE — There was no Village Council meeting Thursday night. Roll call failed to turn up a quorum, so President George Reedy adjourned the session.

Meetings are regularly scheduled for the first and third Thursdays of each month, but whether a special session will be held before the next one was not determined. Indications, however, are that one will be to open bids on materials for street improvement.

Greenfield woman hurt in intersection wreck

A Greenfield woman was hospitalized after a traffic accident early Friday and three persons received minor injuries in crashes Thursday.

As she was approaching the intersection, she saw a pickup truck pulling from Capps Road and turned to avoid a collision. The car struck the pole, traveled across the lawn at the Russell Grice residence and swerved into a field.

The driver was treated for a fractured shoulder and multiple abrasions at Fayette Memorial Hospital. No one was cited.

Ray E. Kingery, 17, Rt. 3, Washington C. H., was driving on Milledgeville - Octa Road Thursday afternoon when a dog ran onto the roadway, causing him to swerve and lose control of the car. The car was a total loss after it struck a tree. Both Kingery and his passenger, Robert E. Bartruff, Rt. 3, Washington C. H., claimed injury but did not require treatment at the time.

Florence I. Hidy, 30, Washington - Waterloo Rd., drove off the right side of Bogus Road at 3:50 p.m. Thursday hitting a tree. Four-year-old Cindy J. Hidy, a passenger, was injured but did not require treatment. Damage to the vehicle was moderate.

Three other accidents were reported Thursday.

POLICE

3:35 p.m. — Karen D. Massie, 24, of 526 Albin Ave., backed from a parking space on N. Main Street and struck a car driven by Darrell D. Smith, 23, Ford Rd., causing minor damage.

8:40 p.m. — Jean E. Lomerson, 43, Bush Rd., backed from a driveway hitting a car owned by Steven M. Taylor, 20, of U.S. 35-NW, which was illegally parked in an alley. She was cited for backing without due regard to safety, and Taylor was given a parking ticket. Damage was minor.

SHERIFF

8:45 a.m. — Lloyd J. Lyons, 42, Greenfield, was driving on Ohio 41 near Rowe-Ging Road when a stone flew from the tire of a truck immediately in front of him, cracking the car's windshield. Joseph A. Yates, 22, Londonderry, was driving the truck.

Coffman to expand

LOGAN — The City Zoning Board has approved tentative plans by the Coffman Stair Co. to install a new $70,000 double drying kiln. The new unit will hold about 100,000 board feet of lumber, Carl Garrett, plant manager, said.

BRIDGE NEAR COMPLETION — Construction on the U.S. 35 Bypass bridge over the DT&I railroad tracks, just southeast of Washington C. H. off Ohio 753, is nearing completion. The W. J. Seidensticker Construction Co. is handling the bridge work.

It depends on the weather

Bypass may be completed this year, Bossman says

By MARK THELLMANN

In this day and age, the 12-hour day, repeated six and maybe seven times a week, seems like an anachronism.

Project Supervisor Paul Rooney explained: "We've come 80 per cent of the way since we started on March 7, 1971. Weather permitting, we should be done before the first of the year."

The original target date for completion was July, 1974.

QUESTIONED about the long hours 50 to 55 men put in each day, one worker chucked and said: "It's not so bad. You start at 7:30 a.m. and finish up at 7:30 p.m. Then you go home and drink a gallon of beer and you're ready for another 12 hours!"

Rooney and the men have been able to stay pretty close to schedule, but there have been problems.

John A. Dilley, labor steward, said that after the J.J. Blazer Construction

"The ground was softer than expected and we had to under-cut by digging two feet further down and reimpact the earth. That set us back 30 days," Dilley commented.

OUTSIDE of rainy weather, vandalism was also a problem.

Dilley said someone had recently shot out two windows of a grader with a BB gun and smashed out some others with a blunt object.

Rooney listed still another unsuspected problem.

"Some of the business establishments east of our U.S. 22 detour have been complaining they are losing patronage. It seems many people are taking U.S. 62 in and out of town to avoid the detour and consequently aren't passing by the businesses they'd usually stop in and patronize," Rooney explained.

Rooney admitted because of this, the men are working hard to finish U.S. 22 in the next two weeks.

One last problem which could slow the U.S. 35 bypass project down is the steel shortage.

"WE ARE having trouble getting reinforcing steel for the decks on the bridges," Rooney said, "But we're not special; everyone is having trouble getting steel."

The U.S. 35 bypass project, which is 6.1 miles long and costing $6 million, has involved many people.

Now that J. J. Blazer has laid the groundwork, many "specialty" subcontractors have been called in: Seidensticker Construction Co. is in charge of bridge work; Collier Construction is doing the electrical work; the L.P. Cavett Co. is doing the blacktopping; Armstrong Steel Erectors are doing the steel work and, finally, Petersons Construction Co. will finish the project with guard rails, fences and grass seed.

GLUE-LIKE GOO — A bulldozer may be able to plow through a house, but Ma Nature can halt more than just bulldozers. This is gushy mud left by a rainstorm which temporarily drowned out bypass work.

NEARLY EVERYONE has an inherent urge to collect things, just anything even if there is no practical use for it..... Where is there a child who never collected pretty stones and brightly colored marbles?.....

But rockhounds are different ... They combine that collecting urge with practicality..... They collect pretty stones, too, but they also do something with them..... With their lapidary equipment, they polish and shape them and put them in rings, pendants and bracelets to create beautiful jewelry..... Some, however, just collect them to look at.....

They will travel hundreds of miles to the mountains in the West to hunt for, and collect, gems and semi-precious stones ..... They also buy, sell and trade "rocks," which they take to their home shops and work them over painstakingly for settings.....

Rockhounds of the Miami Valley Mineral and Gem Club, Inc., will meet from Saturday and Sunday in the Lions Club building at Fairborn to show their collections and buy, sell and trade among them-

Hunt youths in 2nd brutal murder

BOSTON (AP) — Two schools, closed because of fear of racial violence, reopen today at the end of a week in which two whites were brutally murdered by black youths.

A 24-year-old woman died early Wednesday after being drenched with gasoline and set afire. On Thursday, a 65-year-old fisherman was stoned and stabbed to death by a band of 30 to 40 black youths.

"No question the problem is racism and fear," said Chairman Paul R. Tierney of the Boston School Committee. "It's deteriorated to the point of these horrible murders and gone down to the level of children."

He was referring to the deaths of Evelyn Renee Wagler and Ludivico L. Barba, both of the predominantly black Roxbury area.

Mrs. Wagler was was set afire Tuesday night by six black youths and died early Wednesday morning, according to police.

A witness to the killing of Barba told police that the youths first stoned him as he was fishing in the ocean, then stabbed him with his knife and rifled his pockets.

He lived only 20 minutes away and often walked to the Bayside Mall area to fish, said his 55-year-old widow, Verna. She said they had been married a year.

Tierney, who called on Mayor Kevin H. White to meet with community leaders about the problem, said it was better to have pupils in school where police security was available than on the streets.

McCormack Junior High and Dever Elementary schools were closed Thursday morning because it was feared trouble might erupt a half mile away when 100 to 200 hostile youths gathered, authorities said.

That gathering produced no conflict, but police said that bands of black youths later roamed the low-income Columbia Point Housing Project, where Barba was killed. Another white man was stabbed and a white woman was hit with a bottle and robbed.

Police Commissioner Robert J. diGrazia said all three incidents occurred within 20 minutes. Police Supt. Jeremiah P. Sullivan said the attacks "are definitely tied together."

One 16-year-old black youth was arrested Thursday night and charged with armed robbery with a knife in the attack on Ronald Leonard, 37, of Revere, a furniture truck driver who was stabbed in an apartment hallway. Police also were questioning another youth.

Leonard was reported in good condition but still on the danger list at City Hospital.

The woman hit with the bottle — Clare Oates, 28, of Quincy — was treated at a hospital for a head cut and released.

Mayor White said on Thursday that the city was offering a $5,000 reward for information about the six blacks who murdered Mrs. Wagler.

Mrs. Wagler, a carpenter, was in this country on a German visa and had come to Boston from Chicago to stay with friends in Roxbury.

Nixon confers with lawyer

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon, here for his first weekend stay in seven weeks, brought with him a White House lawyer closely associated with the Watergate tapes case and the problems of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Special Counsel J. Fred Buzhardt was among four Nixon aides who flew here with the President Thursday afternoon. The others were Staff Chief Alexander M. Haig Jr., Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler and speechwriter Patrick J. Buchanan.

Besides helping prepare Nixon's legal defense against surrendering White House tapes to Watergate investigators, Buzhardt participated in negotiations between the Justice Department and Agnew's attorneys. Federal prosecutors subsequently began presenting bribery and kickback allegations against Agnew to a grand jury in Baltimore.

Joining the presidential party here was counselor Bryce N. Harlow who last month flew secretly to Phoenix to discuss Agnew's situation with Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.,) Buzhardt, it was learned, also made that trip.

All POW charges are dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time, the secretaries of the Army and Navy have decided to throw out mutiny charges against four Army and Marine enlisted men who were war prisoners in North Vietnam.

Pentagon sources said Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway and Secretary of the Navy John W. Warner would cite lack of evidence, the same grounds for dismissing earlier charges against the two soldiers and two Marines.

The new actions, which were expected, clear the books of all formal charges against any of the 566 Americans who returned from North Vietnamese captivity early this year.

Three other enlisted men also were accused of mutiny, but they are now out of the Army and beyond the reach of military law. They, too, had been cleared previously of aiding the enemy and other misconduct charges. An eighth enlisted former POW shot himself to death before the first charges were dropped in early July.

Last week, Warner dismissed mutiny and other misconduct charges against a Navy captain and a Marine lieutenant colonel but formally censured them for "failing to meet the standards expected of officers" while they were POWs. The two officers are retiring.

The first set of accusations against the eight enlisted men were brought in late May by Air Force Col. Theodore W. Guy, who commanded a POW compound for nearly five years.

It took a little more than a month for the service secretaries to decide there was insufficient evidence to warrant further legal action leading to possible courts-martial.

Army lawyers acknowledged they had recommended dismissal of the charges without questioning 15 to 20 other former war prisoners who had been listed by Guy as potential witnesses against the accused soldiers and Marines. At the same time, other Pentagon legal sources said the Navy-Marine inquiry was less thorough than normal.

A few weeks later, Air Force Maj. Edward W. Leonard Jr., another former POW and a friend of Guy, accused the Army of failing to investigate Guy's allegations adequately. Leonard then filed new mutiny charges against the seven surviving enlisted men.

This time, the investigation took more than two months. Army lawyers said they questioned about 65 former POWs before forwarding their recommendations for dispositions of the charges.

Justice Department watchdog slated

Wiretap curbs planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what it called a drive to regain public confidence, the Justice Department said it is moving toward new wiretap restrictions and may soon appoint its own internal watchdog.

Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus disclosed those developments in an interview Thursday and said the department also is studying whether federal marshals, and possibly even U.S. attorneys, should be career officials rather than political appointees.

In line with Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson's orders, Ruckelshaus refused to discuss most aspects of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's harsh attacks on the department and its investigation of kickback allegations against him.

To do so would only fuel the argument, Ruckelshaus maintained.

Ruckelshaus, the nation's No. 2 law enforcement official, said the department is undertaking a wiretap policy review to determine "whether there are additional safeguards whereby we can assure people that this power is not exercised frivolously."

Without identifying them, he said a broad range of proposals to implement Richardson's goals are under consideration. Some would require legislation, he added.

The study, he said, focuses on taps employed for national security reasons rather than for domestic criminal investigations. The latter are governed by relatively explicit law while national security taps are regulated less by law than by tradition.

Recent criticism has targeted on such national security taps as those used against 17 government officials and newsmen in the White House effort to determine how the Pentagon Papers were leaked.

Such taps now must be recommended

Response filed to Agnew charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Justice Department formally responds today to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's effort to stop the federal grand jury investigation of him.

A lengthy government brief is expected to rebut Agnew's contention that it is illegal to indict a vice president for any criminal offense.

Agnew's lawyers, in moving to halt the probe, said last week the Constitution clearly indicates that a vice president must be impeached by the House and convicted by the Senate before he can be tried in a criminal court. Agnew has requested a House investigation, but Speaker Carl Albert rejected the request at least for the present.

The government reply was ordered submitted by today by U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman.

The Justice Department is scheduled to answer by Monday Agnew's second challenge to the investigation, that federal prosecutors leaked information to the press in order to prejudice the jury against the vice president.

In letters to two newspapers Agnew rejected a suggestion that his own lawyers may have leaked information.

Agnew, in a Chicago speech Thursday night, avoided direct reference to the investigation.

The grand jury heard testimony from four witnesses for six hours Thursday, the same as Wednesday. It is expected to return to work next week, probably Wednesday.

The grand jury also returned another indictment against the Democrat who succeeded Agnew as Baltimore County executive. N. Dale Anderson was charged Wednesday with evading $67,833 in federal income tax from 1969 to 1972.

In August the jury had charged Anderson with extortion, bribery and conspiracy in a kickback scheme involving architects and consulting engineers doing business with the county. He has pleaded innocent.

The prosecutors reportedly are trying to build the same kind of case against Agnew, who has denounced the allegations as "damned lies".

Watergate panel hears more dirty tricks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A resentful Florida Republican says he did campaign dirty work last year to give Democrats "a little bit of the medicine they had given me in the past."

He said he blames Democrats for impersonating a newsman and for distributing phony posters against former Rep. William Cramer, an unsuccessful GOP Senate candidate for whom he worked in 1970.

Robert Benz, 25, said he was still rankled by that experience when he agreed to take a $150-a-month job from Donald H. Segretti, an undercover White House agent who hired him and others to disrupt Democratic presidential primary campaigns last year.

Benz testified Thursday at the Senate Watergate committee's first blacked-out public hearing. No live television coverage was provided because ABC and NBC have ended their rotating coverage, and CBS is broadcasting selected testimony.

Benz said he hired spies, hecklers and pickets; ordered the stink-bombing of two of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's campaign posts on primary eve, and ordered mailing of the "sex letter," which accused Sen. Henry M. Jackson of being a homosexual and said Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey once was found with a prostitute.

"I felt that if the Democrats got a little bit of a dose of their own type of activities, then they would be a little bit reluctant to do this to us in the future," said Benz, a loading dock foreman from suburban Tampa.

He said he could not prove Democrats actually were responsible for the alleged anti-Cramer incidents in 1970, and he said he didn't mention them to authorities until the FBI began questioning him about his own activities early this year.

Earlier Thursday, the committee heard from another Segretti associate, Martin Douglas Kelly, who repeatedly expressed regret for his own campaign of harassment against Democratic presidential contenders.

Kelly said he placed phony newspaper and radio ads, hired pickets, disrupted a Muskie news conference, dispensed false press releases and phony campaign leaflets, and once paid a female acquaintance $20 to strip naked in front of Muskie's hotel and yell, "Muskie, I love you."

The panel recessed its hearings until next Tuesday, when it plans tentatively to hear from two more alleged GOP spies.

In other Watergate-related developments Thursday:

—U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica took under advisement the committee's request for a ruling upholding its demand that Nixon give the committee tape recordings of Watergate-connected conversations. Nixon's lawyer contended in oral arguments Thursday that the panel had no authority to sue to seek the tapes.

—Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy asked a federal appeals court for a new trial on the ground Sirica violated his constitutional rights in his trial in January.

Deaths, Funerals

Mrs. Laura Harris

LONDON — Mrs. Laura Harris, 81, of 17 Kendall St., died at 3:18 p.m. Thursday in the Madison County Hospital.

Born in Pike County, she had lived in Jeffersonville before moving here 16 years ago. She was the widow of Early Harris and a member of the First Baptist Church.

She is survived by two sons, Charles, of Washington C.H., and Orlyn, of Germantown; two daughters, Mrs. Earl (Blanche) Harris, of Cedarville, and Mrs. William (Christine) Jackson, of London; 14 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Services will be held at 1 p.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Robert Wilson, of London, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, Jeffersonville, with the Morrow Funeral Home there assisting. Friends may call at the Chester R. Geer Funeral Home here from 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday.

HAROLD E. JUSTICE — Services for Harold E. Justice, 67, were held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the Kirkpatrick Funeral Home, New Holland, with the Rev. Printis Spear, pastor of the New Holland and Atlanta United Methodist Churches, officiating. Mr. Justice, a mill operator, died Monday in his home at Atlanta.

Jobless rate unchanged 4th month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate stood stubbornly at 4.8 per cent last month as a larger than expected number of teen-agers remained on the job, the government said today.

The Labor Department, reporting an essentially unchanged nationwide job picture for the fourth straight month, said the labor force — the number of people holding and seeking jobs — fell less than it usually does in September because more teen-agers decided to continue working rather than return to school.

Because of this situation, the department figured that total employment encreased by 700,000 by taking seasonal factors into account. It was the first monthly increase in employment since June.

The labor force usually declines sharply in September as young people return to school. The decline was so mild this year that the department figured a seasonally adjusted 750,000 person rise in the labor force, with teen-agers causing most of that increase. At the same time, this number of jobs declined less than usual for September, and the government figured a seasonally adjusted increase of 700,000 to 85.1 million.

The Nixon administration has predicted that the jobless rate would fall to about 4.5 per cent of the work force by the end of the year, then remain at that level well into next year.

The number of people out of work was essentially unchanged, the department said, remaining at 4.3 million.

Burglary wave defendant, 17, joins Marines

The evidence against a 17-year-old Washington C. H. boy charged with 15 counts of burglary and theft was heard by Juvenile Court Judge Rollo M. Marchant Thursday afternoon.

Judge Marchant found the youth delinquent but deferred disposition when he learned that he had been accepted by the U.S. Marine Corps.

The youth was scheduled to leave for boot camp Friday and Judge Marchant decided to postpone any action as long as the boy remains in good standing in military service.

Nusken resigns post as PUCO secretary

Nusken, who had held the post for the past 17 months, will head the legal staff for the Ohio Power Citing Commission. The commission was set up in 1972 to make sure major utility facilities meet environmental and public requirements.

Doctors proclaim house call revival

DENVER (AP) — Family doctors are proclaiming a renaissance of house calls and the cradle-to-grave breed of physician.

"We've had a resurgence of doctors who want to practice family medicine," said Dr. James Price of Brush, Colo., at the end of a convention of family physicians here Thursday.

"We're now a recognized specialty within the medical profession, and we're not frowned upon any longer as the less intelligent graduates of medical school."

A spokesman for the academy said it now has 34,600 members, compared with 31,905 in January 1972. There were fewer than 28,000 members of the academy in 1962.

Among the more recent members is the fictional Marcus Welby, M.D., who has a certificate of membership on the wall of his office in his television series, the spokesman noted.

The spokesman said about 20 per cent of graduating seniors in medical schools now choose family practice, compared with 12 per cent in the early 1960s.

"Students are more socially conscious than a generation ago," Price said. "They seek a person-to-person contact, an interpersonal relationship in depth."

Price said government funds and an image of prestige contributed to an increase in medical specialists and a decline in general practitioners since World War II.

"But now the public is demanding that, if they pay taxes to support a medical school, they have a right to obtain a physician to take care of them," he said.

Price said he treats 40 to 55 patients a day in his rural eastern Colorado office and said he makes house calls about three times a week.

"But we can't make house calls as often as we used to," he added. "The physician supply is too small."

He predicted there would be a severe shortage of family doctors for years to come.

Dr. Basil A. Moskoff, 46, of Zeigler, Ill., a convention delegate, said, "I think the pendulum has swung away from the specialist. People want a bit more than a doctor to simply read a chart. They want a doctor to know a patient."

More butter imports eyed by government

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are signals that the Nixon administration may soon open the door to more butter imports, a move that producer spokesmen say would hurt hard-pressed dairy farmers.

Patrick B. Healy, secretary of the National Milk Producers Federation says the Cost of Living Council reportedly is pressuring President Nixon to raise butter import quotas.

Government officials, however, refuse to confirm or deny the reports cited by Healy. Those claims were listed in a letter Thursday to John Dunlop, director of the council.

Healy told Dunlop a seasonal summer bulge in butterfat requirements to make ice cream is receding and that more of the ingredient will be available soon to make butter.

Thus, Healy said, an increase in the butter quota is "totally unwarranted" at this time.

Agriculture Department officials said privately that they had heard rumors of an impending boost in the annual butter quota — set at 707,000 pounds per year since 1953 — but that nothing has turned up to confirm the rumors.

However, one source said the White House already had decided to enlarge the quota and that 15 million pounds of New Zealand butter already has arrived, held in bonded warehouses until Nixon makes the increase official.

High feed costs have offset gains in milk prices this year, forcing many dairy farmers to trim their herds or sell out altogether Milk production this year is expected to be down at least 3 per cent from 1972.

Food price spurt seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's chief economist said today consumers should expect rapid increases in food prices in the neighborhood of 10 per cent over the next six months before the rate levels off.

Dr. Herbert Stein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, gave the gloomy forecast at a news conference but still suggested that the inflation rate will be better than it was in the first half of this year.

Stein said that it will take some time before food supplies catch up with consumer demand and with rising incomes.

He said that possibly by the end of 1974, consumers might see some decline in food prices. But he said he is not very confident of that.

Seaman completes special course in fire technique

Dave Seaman, a lieutenant with the Washington C. H. Fire Department, has successfully completed the Trade and Industrial Education course for firemen at Ohio State University.

Seaman, 524 French Court, is now qualified to instruct firefighting techniques. Seaman completed the 36-hour course while on vacation from the Washington C. H. department.

Every fire department is required to have a trained instructor for refresher courses and new techniques. Seaman will be instructing at village fire departments throughout Fayette County.

He has been a member of the Washington C. H. Fire Department for the past four years and is one of four holding an authorized lieutenant's post.

The National Weather Service forecast mostly sunny skies over Ohio today accompanied by somewhat cooler and drier air.

Temperatures today were expected to fall in the upper 50s and 60s in the north, and in the lower 70s in the south.

A high pressure area moving eastward from Missouri will hover over the state today, bringing more clear skies and light winds, and temperatures in the 40s.

The weather service is predicting more sunny skies on Saturday, with afternoon readings in the upper 60s and 70s.

It will be mild in Ohio Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with a chance of showers Monday or Tuesday. Highs all three days will range from the upper 60s extreme north to the mid 70s along the Ohio River. Lows will be in the upper 40s and low 50s.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Showers and thunderstorms dampened much of the eastern third of the nation today while isolated storms dumped heavy rains on southern Texas.

Flash-flood warnings were issued in southern Texas and more than an inch of rain was added to areas around Del Rio and Cotulla.

Other storms rolled over the lower Mississippi Valley and lingered from the eastern Great Lakes region to the Appalachians.

High winds damaged three homes, several barns and out buildings and caused injuries to one man in a farming area in extreme southwestern Pennsylvania, Thursday afternoon.

Three natural-gas wells cracked open and three homes were damaged near Nineveh, Pa., east of Wheeling, W. Va. No injuries were reported there.

Did GOP bug demos?

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County prosecutors say they believe that the Democrats' headquarters for the 1972 national convention here were bugged by Republicans.

"We believe it took place, and we believe we can develop the evidence to prove that it took place," Dade County State's Atty. Richard Gerstein, a Democrat, said Thursday.

Earlier in the day, however, Gerstein said in an interview with NBC-TV that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox had asked him to "withhold prosecution and, for the time being, we're going along with their request."

A spokesman for Cox refused immediate comment Thursday night, saying a statement on the situation would be issued on Friday.

Railroad plan being readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration soon will propose that the federal government guarantee $2 billion in private loans to rebuild the nation's railroads, sources within the Department of Transportation say.

Coupled with the loan guarantee, the sources say, will be a plan severely limiting the Interstate Commerce Commission's authority to require railroads to serve cities located on unprofitable routes.

Legislation to implement the proposals has been cleared by the White House Office of Management and Budget and will be presented to Congress in the next few weeks, the sources say.

Social Security boost approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee has approved a measure to increase Social Security benefits by 7 per cent.

The panel attached an amendment sponsored by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., to a minor House-passed bill Thursday. The increase would take effect 30 days after enactment.

A 5.9 per cent increase is to take effect next July 1. The Senate has voted to move the date up to Jan. 1 but the House hasn't acted on that measure.

Nixon drops in popularity

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The latest Gallup Poll shows another decline in public approval of President Nixon's performance in office.

Of 1,505 American adults who were asked, "Do you approve or disapprove of the way Nixon is handling his job as President?" 32 per cent said they approved. They were surveyed Sept. 21-24.

The President had the approval of 35 per cent in a similar survey Sept. 7-10 and 38 per cent in a late August poll.

Nixon's popularity reached its lowest point, 31 per cent approval, while the Watergate hearings were being televised in early August. His highest popularity, 68 per cent, followed the Vietnam peace settlement early this year.

In the latest poll, 59 per cent disapproved of Nixon's performance, while 9 per cent expressed no opinion.

by the FBI and authorized by the attorney general, who has said he will agree to them only to protect the nation against hostile acts by a foreign power, to obtain vital foreign intelligence information, or to protect U.S. secrets from foreign powers.

Discussing the internal watchdog unit, Ruckelshaus indicated that Richardson is on the verge of creating an inspector general's office primarily assigned to investigating "extraordinary situations" involving the department in widespread public debate.

The office could handle such cases as internal investigations for improper leaks of information to newsmen, he said.

The vice president and his lawyers repeatedly have accused the department of leaking damaging allegations in a campaign to drive him from office, charges Richardson has angrily denied.

ABA seeks data on Watergate

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The American Bar Association has asked the Senate Watergate investigating committee for a special computer hookup to gather evidence on lawyers involved for disbarment proceedings.

American Bar Association President Chesterfield Smith, 56, of Lakeland, Fla., here to address the Cincinnati Bar Association Thursday, said he is awaiting word from Samuel Dash, special committee counsel, on the request.

"We want to purge from our profession any crooks who are unworthy of our high profession," Smith told a news conference.

Smith said Dash promised to take the matter up with the committee Cost of the hookup with the committee's computer was estimated by Dash at $30,000, Smith said. A complete transcript would cost $95,000, Smith said he was told.

Smith said the ABA wants to ferret out all information from the hearings involving lawyers in the Watergate conspiracy.

He said the information will be distributed to bar associations in eight states for disciplinary action.

"We haven't done much for states in the area of discipline," said Smith, noting the ABA had a membership of 173,000. He said the ABA would pay for the transcripts as a favor to the state bar associations.

Smith complained that the ABA has been the target of heavy criticism "because of 15 or 22 lawyers associated with the government in Washington, one, if any, practicing law.

"It's awful. It's blackened us, and we're trying to do something about it.

"There is a great chance that many lawyers involved with Watergate will not be convicted," because Smith said, pretrial proceedings have been "so prejudicial, and you're not going to be able to impanel a jury.

Smith said, however, bar association proceedings put the burden of proof on the accused lawyers. This differs from criminal proceedings in the courts.

"We could still disbar them," he said, citing former Attorney General John Mitchell as an example.

"If he were indicted and acquitted, we could proceed with the same facts and disbar. The bar has an obligation to the public to proceed with disciplinary proceedings."

Smith said there was no need for a code of conduct for lawyers.

Consumer resistance stiffening

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer resistance to rising prices is beginning to stiffen. One widely known business consultant on economic matters is forecasting a poor Christmas— for retailers.

The growing cautiousness of buyers hasn't demonstrated itself sharply to date, but attitudinal surveys show that many Americans have had their fill of spending for the time being and are now prepared to save.

Such forecasts in the past sometimes have had an uncanny accuracy rating, and few businesses are willing to ignore the findings. The first signs of weakness already are showing up in clothing, furniture and appliance sales.

Higher prices are listed as only one of the reasons. Among the others are:

—A growing burden of debt. The ratio of installment debt to after-tax income has risen to about 15.5 per cent. While this figure isn't unusual, it is considered somewhat high when combined with other factors.

—Perhaps the most important of these other factors is the inability of many workers to maintain their buying power. Goldman Sachs, the investment banking firm, notes that while disposable income rose at an annual rate of nearly 9 per cent during the second quarter of the year, inflation reduced it to an effective rate of 1.5 per cent.

Earnings of production workers in August rose 7 per cent over a year earlier, to $3.92 an hour, making weekly earnings of $145.43, about $9.27 higher than in August 1972. But higher prices resulted in a 2 per cent decline in spending power.

Further erosion of buying power can be expected in the final quarter of the year, according to Chase Manhattan Bank, which comments:

"For this reason, plus a host of others—ranging from news about the American dollar to interest rates, the stock market and Watergate—the public has turned decidedly pessimistic about economic conditions." As consumers retreat from the market place they are expected to tidy up their personal financial conditions. Expected to be most noticeable is a tendency to repay debt and build savings.

The present savings rate is about 6 per cent of income and is variously forcast to rise between one and two percentage points. In 1969 it reached a percentage between 8 and 9.

Such an increase would deprive retailers of billions of dollars in sales, although if conditions repeat themselves as they have in the past, a spurt in sales a year or so from now might equalize matters.

Dale defends Nixon on Watergate

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The original chairman of the Committee to Re-elect The President, himself a publisher, has attacked the news media for what he called giving the public false impressions about President Nixon's part in Watergate.

Francis L. Dale, publisher of The Cincinnati Enquirer, Thursday addressed the Cincinnati Rotary Club. He was the original chairman of the election group later headed by former Attorney General John Mitchell.

Dale attacked the New York Times, the Washington press corps Federal Judge John Sirica and Sam Dash, special counsel for the Senate committee investigating Watergate.

"The press has created a wrong impression in the minds of 38 per cent of the people," said Dale, citing a recent poll in which that many people believed the President had advance knowledge of the Watergate bugging.

"We have an obligation to correct that impression," said Dale.

He said he believes some newsmen seeking information on Watergate got help from partisan politicians with political motives, and from civil servants within the administration who "lean towards the Democrats" because they were appointed by Democratic presidents.

He said he believes "the press has earned some of the harsh criticism" stemming from Watergate coverage.

In some cases, Dale said, the press, instead of reporting, "is now an active participant ... a major factor in the course of events."

He said that in some instances the press "has prostituted itself" to the unidentified "reliable sources." He cited the New York Times as being "an attack dog" and the Washington press corps for "bias."

Dale said U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica "failed miserably in handling the Watergate cases and for "bullying them — the defendants — with tentative sentences."

Dale said the special Senate committee investigating Watergate has become "an albatross" to the Democrats. He charged that chief committee counsel Samuel Dash has "led" testimony, that "any competent cross-examiner would have made a shambles of John Dean's testimony," and that "after six months of the circus, there has yet to appear any significant draft legislation on campaign practices."

High court nixes appeals

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A former newspaper copy boy convicted of killing a police officer at Mingo Junction has lost in a bid to have the Ohio Supreme Court review his case.

The court ruled unanimously Thursday that no substantial constitutional question was involved in the appeal of Donald Nickerson.

He was charged in the slaying Dec. 30, 1970, of Michael Maguschak, a Mingo Junction police officer, during a shootout. Nickerson was shot and critically wounded, but eventually recovered and was convicted in Jefferson County Common Pleas Court.

His counsel based the appeal on self defense.

Nickerson, a former employe of the Dayton Daily News, sought at the time of the shootout for parole violation, was an associate of Gordon "Spunky" Firman, one of Ohio's most notorious outlaws who also was being sought for parole violation. Firman had run off with Nickerson's wife, records showed.

Firman, captured a short time later, once was known as the "barefoot bandit of Walhonding Valley" as a result of a 30-day spree in early 1960 that involved a number of holdups of truck drivers on lonely roads in the Coshocton area.

In other action, the Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal from an assessment by Summit County Commissioners of $450 for tap-ins for new sewer lines connections.

The Home Builders Association of Greater Akron appealed in common pleas court after the charge was ordered by commissioners July 18, 1972. That court held the assessment valid, and the Summit County Court of Appeals affirmed.

Jack Klein of Cleveland, arrested there April 14, 1972, for carrying a concealed weapon by plainclothes detectives acting on a tip, as turned down in another appeal before in high court.

Klein's lawyer claimed the search that produced a pistol from his trouser pocket "was not incident to a lawful arrest since there was no probable cause for arrest." The Supreme Court ruled that no constitutional question was involved.

Also was rejected was the appeal of Joseph M. McDonald of Cleveland, convicted of killing an off-duty detective, John Appanites Jr., in a Cleveland department store Dec. 3, 1969.

McDonald was sentenced to die in the electric chair, but on appeals court reduced the sentence to life imprisonment in 1972. The high court said there was no constitutional question involved in his appeal.

Probe Butler County crash fatal to 4

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Highway Patrol continued its probe today into a car-cement truck collision that snuffed out the lives Thursday of four small children and hospitalized their parents.

"The whole thing remains under investigation," said a patrol spokesman Thursday night. The spokesman indicated charges may be filed today.

"I couldn't stop," James Henson, 31, of Somerville, told officers from his hospital bed. Police said the Henson car left 72 feet of skidmarks on the road before ramming and overturning a cement truck on Ohio 127 at 73 in Butler County.

The police report said the Henson car speedometer was frozen on 60 m.p.h. after the collision.

Henson's condition remained fair, but his wife, Jacqueline, 32, was serious. She suffered multiple fractures.

Police said three of the children were thrown out of the car by the impact. The fourth was crushed in the wreckage under the dash board.

Ohio gasoline station closures postponed for next 10 days

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's independent gasoline dealers have postponed any widespread shutdowns of their stations for at least 10 days to give the government a chance to ease their plight under Phase IV controls.

The decision came following a meeting here that lasted until late Thursday night. Some 300 service station operators attended.

"In 10 days, if there is no relief, all I can say is you had better stock up on gasoline," said David Pickney, vice president of the Central Ohio Independent Gasoline Dealers Association.

"That's all I can tell you," he said. "There is no other alternative. The dealers have gone beyond their limits."

Pickney said dealers attending the meeting didn't get a chance to vote on a closedown resolution because their delegate to Washington, Walter Stein, mentioned efforts in Congress to provide relief and suggested the 10-day wait.

Most of the dealers, he said, came expecting a vote to shut down and probably would have approved it if Stein hadn't given his report at the beginning of the meeting.

The dealers are hoping, he said, that Congress will permit them to pass increased costs from the oil companies along to the customers. They can't do it now under Phase IV controls.

The dealers, Pickney said, are aware that a shutdown would hurt the customer. "I think they are owed a debt of gratitude in Columbus because they haven't closed up yet," he said. "They can only survive so long."

Stein, Pickney said, gave both sides of the story from Washington. "He mentioned especially the bill that would allow the dealer to pass on increases from the oil companies."

The Democratic party split

It is common knowledge that the Democratic party was badly divided over the choice of Sen. George McGovern to be its presidential candidate last year. The deeply traumatic extent of this split is set forth in detail now in the latest of the informative University of Michigan reports which the institution's Center for Political Studies has been producing since the early 1950s.

The gist of the report was presented to the American Political Science Association's recent convention in a paper significantly entitled, A Majority Party in Disarray." We are told that "above all else, the outcome of the (1972) election was the result of the ideological polarization within the Democratic ranks that pitted the left-wing Democrats against those on the right."

McGovern was essentially the candidate of the party's left wing. His position on the issues, according to the Michigan study, alienated so many Democrats that 42 per cent of those who went to the polls voted for President Nixon. The study does not support the view that popular aversion to McGovern was the most decisive factor in the outcome.

It finds, rather, that Mr. Nixon's position on most of the major issues - the Vietnamese War and amnesty, and a broad range of social questions - was closer to how the electorate felt about these matters. The voters leaned toward McGovern only on questions of urban unrest, inflation and the environment.

The crossing over of so many Democrats in 1972 does not lead the authors of the Michigan study to endorse the view that a Republican majority is emerging. Nor do they predict whether the Democratic split will be a permanent phenomenon.

What they do say is that for the first time since the Michigan studies began we had an election in which issues were more of a factor than traditional partisan loyalties. There is no doubt that the Democratic leadership has its work cut out for it in repairing the damage to the party.

'Shared aspirations'

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger made a nice speech to the United Nations about a "peace whose stability rests not only on a balance of forces but on shared aspirations." The speech went on to mention "humane values," but it scamped the far more important question of a shared conception of rights.

Some nations respect individual liberty, some don't. Some believe in such things as habeas corpus; others permit their police to knock on the door at midnight and take you away.

Achieveing "shared aspirations" and cultivating a common feeling about "humane values" in a world that has no agreed-upon theory of what is "inalienable" is rather hopeless, which is one reason Henry Kissinger, as a practical operator, deals almost entirely in the business of balancing the power.

The biggest blocsk in the U.N. — the Communist countries, the nations that belong to the Organization of African Unity — seem to be light-years away from Western conceptions of rights. In most of them the right to vote consists of a compulsion to endorse a one-party slate. True enough, the right to vote is stressed by the Liberation Committee of the Organization of African Unity when it is talking about Rhodesia and South Africa.

THE COMMUNISTS in Chile respected the franchise as a tactical weapon needed to bring Salavador Allende to power, and now that Allende has gone because he tried to ruin the middle class the Communists are weeping crocodile tears about the suppression of "democracy."

To hear the Communists talking about voting rights in democratic countries which they have not yet taken over, you might think that the franchise is the only important item in the whole quiver of rights. The same situation holds when the OAU Liberation Committee talks about the suppression of black majorities in South Africa and Rhodesia.

Personally, since I value the franchise, I don't blame people who want it for themselves everywhere. But if I were a white Rodesian or South African, I would also want some reassurance that, if universal suffrage were to be granted, my right to keep the fruits of my labor would remain intact no matter who ran the government.

No settler who has spent years of his life hacking a farm out of wilderness or bringing a new business into existence is going to give up what his life energies have created just to satisfy a conception of rights that discriminates against the right of ownership.

The Organization of African States will get nowhere with Rhodesia and South Africa as long as its members support the terrorist groups that are enumerated in a recent report of the American African Affairs Association. This particular study, carried out on the spot by Walter Darnell Jacobs, Carl Peterson, and William Yarborough, three first-rate reporters who have academic and military intelligence backgrounds, makes for horrendous reading.

The terrorists have a particular "thing" about electric power developments. Frelimo, a major terrorist band operating against Portuguese Mozambique, is trying to disrupt the building of $400,000,000 concrete arch dam at Cabora Bassa on the Zambesi River which would mean power for all southern Africa. There is no color bar in Mozambique, the first intended beneficiary of the dam, and if Frelimo succeeds in sabotaging the big hydroelectric project a million farmers, both black and white, will be deprived of irrigation.

OTHER TERRORISTS have threatened a dam project on the Kunene River in the northern part of Southwest Africa. The main beneficiaries of the Kunene project would be the Ovambo tribes.

The World Council of Churches, with its strange view of Christian charity, has opposed the building of the Kunene dam on grounds that, by making life easier for the Ovambo, it would also make them less revolutionary.

The more the terrorists oppose economic development and the rights of ownership, the less likelihood there will be of getting a universal right to vote out of presently constituted governments. People who have worked hard for what they possess aren't going to risk one right for another.

What Allende discovered in Chile has universal application.

Rockefeller and Reagan

NEW YORK — The Presidential campaign of 1976 has to all intents and purposes already begun. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York and Gov. Ronald Reagan of California are all but avowed candidates for the nomination of the Republican party.

This may be good for the mineograph companies and the publicists who live off press releases, statements and speeches, but there is surely a question about the wisdom of so early a start on an election certain to be turbulent.

Most of Rockefeller's associates are convinced he will not run next year for a fifth term as governor. Instead he will devote his resources and his time to pursuing the Presidency. This will be a considerable gain, since it is estimated that in winning a fourth term three years ago he spent upward of $15 million.

Moreover, the conviction among political pros is that 1974 promises to be chancy for the ins of whatever party. While Rockefeller could in all probability get a fifth term — the Democrats in the state are leaderless — he would risk for no good reason all he has achieved. And, despite his persistent enemies, that achievement is formidable.

ROCKEFELLER'S approach to '76 differs from Reagan's as day from night. The New York governor is going about the country speaking to high-level groups about America's problems and what must be done to master them if we are to move into a third century as a free people.

To the American Political Science Association convention and to town halls around the country he discusses his proposal for a Commission on Critical Choices. He is presently engaged in enlisting high-level men and women to serve on this commission and also to raise the money, at least $4 million, to finance it from government and the foundations.

He takes this with the solemn, almost evangelical seriousness that reflects one facet of his temperament. Turning in its report in 1976, the bipartisan commission will set the tone for the bicentennial observance of America's independence. It will also put Rockefeller front and forward as the nation's problem solver.

ROCKEFELLER is well aware of his fundamental error in his three previous tries at the Presidency. As he put it recently, he had the polls but Richard Nixon and Barry Goldwater had the delegates. What you need, he was told by a friend, is someone who knows the congressional districts of this country like the palm of his hand; someone like, say, Melvin Laird. A forthcoming move will be to enlist such an adjutant.

For many long-term Republicans at the delegate level Rockefeller looks too liberal, too much the ideal of the Eastern Seaboard Establishment. His associates consider that one offset to this is in the tough drug-abuse law that the governor sponsored.

For certain hard-drug offenses it provides life sentences without parole. Rockefeller can show that the tough law has already brought a drop in drug crimes.

But this is incidental to his emphasis on the lead the state has taken in his 15 years as governor in education, housing, clean water, pollution control, welfare. In contrast, Reagan blows up his tax-ceiling constitutional amendment and his demand for an end to welfare chiseling.

SPEAKING to the Town Hall of California in Los Angeles the other day, Rockefeller described how, in effect, he had socialized the whole rail-commuter transportation systems serving New York City. That had become a necessity as fares threatened to jump to prohibitive levels under private operation. On the ballot in November is a $3.5 billion transportation bond issue, with 60 per cent for highways.

The Rockefeller approach to '76 follows a familiar pattern. Beginning in 1957 a series of reports on the nation and the world bore the Rockefeller imprimatur. They were prepared under the direction of Henry A. Kissinger, then on the Harvard faculty, who had a principal hand in writing them as well.

Rockefeller was jubilant when his long-time associate and friend, Kissinger, at his side during his 1968 search for delegates, was named Secretary of State.

One thing Reagan and Rockefeller have in common — they are careful to skirt around the mess in Washington. The New York governor makes only oblique references to the "cloud presently hanging over the conduct of public affairs."

They are both obviously counting on no help from the beleagured Nixon-Agnew Administration.

Hal Boyle . . . Jumping to conclusions

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

Women rarely worry about marrying a man smarter than them, because they always feel that if they can't outwit a man they can always outmaneuver him by superior cunning. That's why a wife continues to try to remold her husband nearer to her own wishes. From birth she thinks of man as a form of workable putty.

More men would achieve success in this world, and enjoy life more, if they wore shoes one half size bigger. Tight shoes will cramp anybody's life style, as well as sour his personality.

An optimist is a man in middle age with a chronic disease who believes the onward march of medicine will find a care for it in his lifetime.

The quickest way to win a reputation as a bore is to insist on performing card tricks at cocktail parties.

It is no testimony to your popularity to be invited to spend a weekend at someone's country place. People who own country places would rather invite Jack the Ripper for company than face a weekend alone with themselves.

One reason civilization is such a monumental failure today is that it no longer inspires man to test himself to the utmost to see what he can do. Instead, it inspires him chiefly to escape blame for whatever happens. He would rather keep his nose clean than save his soul.

The most overrated food in America is steak, partly because of its current high price. But a really first-rate steak is, and always has been, a rarity. The ordinary diner can always get more real enjoyment of a well-cooked tasty pot roast or even meatloaf than a run-of-the-shop steak. A steak, even at a top restaurant, is always a gamble. There are fewer things duller than a steak diet, and if a dictator made the eating of steak mandatory at every meal, he would be overthrown by a revolution within three months. It would be the same, of course, if it were caviar that was decreed, but the revolution would start four months sooner.

It takes a man with a beard roughly six weeks longer to win a girl's heart than a man who has only a mere mustache.

Jogging may be a pleasurable sport and fine exercise in some ways, but some joggers themselves are getting to be quite a nuisance. Their friends have to take a full half day off work in order to attend their funerals.

Austria to open Jewish center

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austria probably won't close the Schoenau transit camp for emigrating Soviet Jews until other arrangements are made to move them through Austria, official Austrian sources report.

The camp, in a castle 70 miles south of Vienna, is continuing to process Jews bound for Israel despite Chancellor Bruno Kreisky's promise last Saturday to close it. The promise was made to two Arab gunmen who had taken three Russian Jews and an Austrian border guard hostage.

About 100 more Soviet Jews arrived in Vienna on Wednesday and were taken to the castle under heavy guard. They were expected to leave by Israeli airliner within 24 hours.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, Oct. 5, the 278th day of 1973. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1954, Italy and Yugoslavia formally settled their dispute over the city of Trieste.

In 1503, Christopher Columbus discovered Costa Rica.

In 1880, the 21st American president, Chester A. Arthur, was born in Fairfield, Vt.

In 1881, artist Pablo Picasso was born in Malaga, Spain.

In 1918, as World War I neared the end, the Allies announced that the German Hindenburg line had been broken.

Ten years ago: A hurricane was battering Cuba after taking some 5,000 lives in Haiti.

Five years ago: A commission which had investigated a campus uprising at New York's Columbia University issued a strong indictment of the school's administration.

One year ago: President Nixon dismissed charges by Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern that the Nixon administration was the most corrupt and deceitful in American history.

Thought for today: I have never met a man who has given me as much trouble as myself. — Dwight L. Moody, American evangelist, 1837-1899.

Alabama dairymen set a new record in 1972 with a gross income of almost $64 million.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Neighbors in Houston lead a dog's life

DEAR ABBY: I do not approve of turning a .22 on a dog either, but I can understand why someone might.

What I can't understand is people who insist upon keeping large dogs in the city. They send their dogs (some large as ponies) to do their dirty jobs on neighbors' lawns. Loose dogs chase children and bicycles and threaten pedestrians. On the other hand, fenced-in dogs often spend the entire day barking. The owners are usually gone all day and don't believe it when they are told their dogs bark constantly.

Similarly, dogs kept outside at night go on a five-minute barking spree every few hours all night long.

One lady told me she wants her dog to bark at night because she likes the sound. Well, I don't!

R.G. IN HOUSTON

DEAR R.G.: Whether large dogs are kept in the city for protection, hunting, or as household pets, unless they are well trained and kept under control night and day, they are a public nuisance and, as such, should be carted off-with their owners-to Siberia.

DEAR ABBY: Like "Me" in Illinois, and the daughter who takes care of "grandma" who puts $200 a month in the bank, I took care of my stepfather for four years and paid for two of his trips to the hospital.

When he died I requested his heirs to honor our "out-of-pocket" expenses that were spent directly for him. (I had check stubs for verification.) They laughed at me.

I hired a lawyer, turned in a bill for his keep for four years, his hospital bill, and his funeral expenses. The lawyer got me twice what I had asked for, AFTER his percentage

I really loved my step father, and would have cared for him without compensation, but I had no love for his heirs who had turned him out when he came a chore.

Why don't people who care for those they love get a lawyer and collect what is due them?

ME TOO IN MISSOURI

DEAR ME: They may, after this hits print.

DEAR ABBY: About two months ago I bought a package of rice. I noticed small brown bits but thought they were just dark kernels of rice. Upon closer examination, I saw them move! When I returned the rice to the market, they looked at me as though they thought I had placed the bugs there!

Last week, when I opened a five-pound box of flour, I found more bugs!

This morning I started to make pancakes. In measuring the pancake flour, yes, more bugs! Really Abby, I am afraid to make anything made with wheat, flour, or even cereals. I wonder how long I may have been eating these bug-infested foods. I never was a finicky person who examined things under a microscope, but I am getting a phobia from all this. What kind of bugs are they? How can I find out? And how do I get rid of them?

BUGGED IN NEVADA

DEAR BUGGED: I wrote to the University of Nevada Entomology Department, College of Agriculture, Reno, and heard nothing from them. Then I phoned the University of Minnesota's Entomology Department where I was graciously told: "Have the lady send a sample of the bug to us. We'll indentify it and remedy her bug situation. "Minnesota, hats off to thee!

the ILLUSTRATED BIBLE

The Birth of Eve

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam . . . and He took one of his ribs . . . and made He a woman . . . Genesis II: 21-22

After God had created Adam, He planted a garden "eastward in Eden"—a paradise of trees and flowers of great beauty. And to this garden he brought Adam and, later, all the beasts of the field and the birds of the air, to see what he would call them. Adam gave names to all these creatures and God was pleased. Then it was, according to the Bible, that the Lord said: "It is not good that the man should be alone" . . . so, putting Adam to sleep, He took one of his ribs and from it created Eve, the mother of all mankind. And, as the Lord gave her to Adam, he cried out: "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; and she shall be called Woman."

Bishop of Philippines to visit St. Andrew's

St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Highland Ave., will have the Rev. Benito C. Cabanhan, bishop of the Philippine Islands, as guest minister Sunday.

He will conduct morning prayer at 10 a.m., with the public invited. Holy Communion will be at 8 a.m.

Born in Bambanay, San Juan Province, the Rev. Mr. Cabanban was ordained a deacon in 1948 and became a priest in 1949. He was elected suffragan bishop in 1958 and was consecrated in 1959 as the first Filipino to sit in the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church.

In 1967 he became diocesan bishop, succeeding the last American bishop of the Philippine Episcopal Church. Rev. Mr. Cabanban was awarded the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Virginia and is presently chairman of the National Council of the Philippine Episcopal Church.

On Monday, members will attend a district meeting for Interpretation of the Conference Ministries at Hilliard United Methodist Church, Columbus.

Suit filed on building maintenance

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Civil Service Employes Association filed a lawsuit Thursday to keep maintenance services in the new state office building from going to an outside agency.

In a taxpayer's suit, James F. Marshall, executive secretary of the OCSEA, claimed the $1,336,588-a-year contract granted by the Ohio Building Authority Sept. 4 violated the state constitution.

"They are trying to give away control of a building that belongs to the people," Marshall said. He called it a precedent that could destroy the civil service system in Ohio.

The contract for maintenance, security and mail room service for the 44-story building went to the 100 East Broad Corp., a private firm.

The building, which will have 41 floors of floor space, is to partially open next month.

Marshall said the constitution provides that employment for the state be by civil service rather than contracted out.

"If we allow the state to contract out maintenance of the state office building, are we to assume the Highway Patrol is the next agency to be staffed by the company with the most pull in the governor's office?" Marshall asked.

Marshall wants the court to keep the OBA from carrying out terms of the contract for the building at 30 E. Broad St. in downtown Columbus, across from the capitol.

Garnes elected to post

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — William E. Garnes, director of the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services, has been elected a director of the Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies.

Lecture series opens Sunday at McNair Church

The first of a series of lectures will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the McNair Presbyterian Church, according to the Rev. Wilbur Bullock.

The Rev. Mark Dove, pastor of the Grace United Methodist Church, will be the speaker Sunday. Rev. Bullock said four lectures will be held during the month of October.

Revival at Good Hope

GOOD HOPE — The Good Hope Baptist Church will hold revival services at 7:30 p.m. nightly Oct. 7-14. Special singing will be provided by the Christian Way Singers of Washington C.H. There will be guest ministers from the other Good Hope churches each evening.

Revival services slated

The Rose Avenue Wesleyan Church, 312 Rose Ave., will conduct revival services at 7:45 p.m. nightly Oct. 8-14. The Rev. Donald E. Howard, of Zanesville, will be the guest speaker.

ROYALTY TO REIGN — Mrs. Keith Berner (center), will reign as Princess of Phi Theta Gamma chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, at the annual Fall Festival Dance Oct. 13 from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m. in Mahan Hall. Herkie Coe and the Wellingtons will provide music for dancing. Tickets will be available at the door. Members of Mrs. Berner's court will be Miss Pam Starr (left), and Mrs. Roger McCoy (right.) Mrs. Berner will compete in Beta Sigma Phi's International Sweetheart contest in February.

New officers installed by Town and Country Club

Members of the Town and Country Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. John Stimpert, with Mrs. Charles Duff and Mrs. Jack Frost acting as hostesses.

The meeting was opened by the president Mrs. Alvin Armintrout and the secretary-treasurer's report given by Mrs. Richard Rankin. Mrs. Dwight Duff reported on the club's participation in the National Hunting and Fishing Day event held recently at the Fish and Game Lodge in which the garden clubs participated.

Mrs. Lee Cleland reported on the most recent Presidents' Council meeting which she and Mrs. Armintrout had attended.

The Regional Meeting to be held in Mahan Hall on October 30 was discussed and plans made for the club to provide four table arrangements for decorations and to handle the registration that day. Each club is to have a sales table at the all day meeting and ideas for items to sell were discussed.

The County Christmas Flower Show will be held December 3 in the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church. Mrs. Cleland discussed the show schedule and asked members to select the arrangement they wish to make.

Plans for the next meeting which will be the annual Fall Foliage Tour at the Rankin Cottage in Ross County were made. The all day outing will feature a covered dish luncheon at 12 noon and each member is asked to bring a covered dish and her own table service.

It was decided that the November through March meetings will begin at 7:30, rather than 8:00 p.m.

Following the business session, Mrs. Armintrout thanked the members for their cooperation during the past year. She then conducted an impressive installation ceremony for the incoming officers, who are: President - Mrs. Cleland; vice president - Mrs. Armintrout; secretary-treasurer - Mrs. Rankin; and publicity - Mrs. Dwight Duff. Each officer was presented a lovely corsage by the outgoing president.

Mrs. Stimpert then introduced her son Keith who had participated in the Americans Abroad program of the American Field Service last summer and had spent most of the summer months living with a family in Venezuela. Keith showed slides and told of his experiences as an exchange student and answered many questions from the group.

At the conclusion of the enjoyable program, refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Stimpert, to the members and Mrs. Medrith Mitchell, a guest.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Dwight Duff and will feature a demonstration on decoupage.

Zeta chapter members motor to Greenfield

Members submitted suggestions of themes for the 'Sweetheart Dance' which will be held at the American Legion Hall Feb. 16. Mrs. James Dunn is chairman.

Mrs. Frank Giacomini gave posters and tickets for the skating party Oct.25. Mrs. Pollard is winner of the ways and means gift.

"Self Estimate" was the title of the program presented by Mrs. Fred Pitzer. Mrs. Michael Riggilo was winner of the contest.

Mrs. Pollard, Mrs. Jim Coldiron and Mrs. Dale Lowe served refreshments. The next meeting will be a Pledge Ritual and Ritual of Jewels.

Those present were Mrs. Clary, Mrs. Roger Snyder, Mrs. Rick Kelley, Mrs. Jud Thompson, Mrs. Giacomini, Mrs. Riggilo, Mrs. Lowe, Mrs. Roger Pemberton, Mrs. Coldiron, Mrs. Ernie Gettelfinger, Mrs. Skip Hamilton, Mrs. Randy Miller, Mrs. Jim Bonham, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Pollard and Mrs. Pitzer.

Heat flaked cooked fish with cooked rice in a generous amout of butter. Garnish with sieved hard-cooked egg. Call the dish Kedgeree and serve for brunch.

Zip up mayonnaise by adding curry powder, a blend of many spices. Serve the curried mayonnaise on egg and lettuce salad.

Fall arrangements made at Alpha CCL meeting

"What is the Abundant Life?" was the devotions topic given by Mrs. Margaret Helfrich when members of the Alpha Child Conservation League met in the home of Mrs. Robert Minshall, 828 Briar Ave., Wednesday evening. Assisting her were Mrs. Helfrich, Mrs. Merrill Lynch and Mrs. Marie Trackett. Mrs. Allen McClung, president, conducted the meeting.

A representative from a local florist shop demonstrated how to make fall arrangements by using fruit and flowers.

The 53rd Ohio CCL Convention was announced for Oct. 10 and 11 in the Commodore Perry Motor Inn in Toledo. The theme this year is "Through the Eyes of a Child." The featured speaker is Dr. George W. Crane.

It was also announced that little gifts are needed for the Community Action Outread Program for the Elderly, held each Monday in First Presbyterian Church.

Other correspondence was read by various committee chairmen and committee reports were heard.

Mrs. Merrill Lynch will be hostess for the Nov. 7 meeting, with Mrs. William Fletcher and Mrs. George Naylor assisting. The finance committee will be in charge of the program.

Mrs. Charles Hurtt reported on the OCCL Federation meeting held Sept. 13 in the home of Mrs. Roger Rapp, of which she and Mrs. Robert W. Fries attended.

Pumpkin pie and coffee were served by the hostesses to Mrs. Fulton Alkire, Mrs. William Clarke, Mrs. Robert Climer, Mrs. Marcus Crago, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Harold Foster, Mrs. Fries, Mrs. Willard Greer, Mrs. Earl Hartley, Mrs. Hurtt, Mrs. Russell Liston, Mrs. R. B. McCoy, Mrs. McClung, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Minshall, Mrs. Naylor, Mrs. Clyde Palmer, Mrs. Paul Ream, Mrs. Richard Waters, Mrs. Frank Reno, Mrs. Wendell Whiteside and Mrs. Louise Little, a guest.

Twin Oaks Club to donate gifts

Twin Oaks Garden Club members met recently in the home of Mrs. Thomas Braden, president. Mrs. Willard Bonham gave the treasurer's report and Mrs. Braden read a letter from the Homemakers Outreach Program asking for small items for game prizes. The club voted to donate some of these items.

Mrs. Braden announced the Regional Meeting of Garden Clubs will be Oct. 30 in Mahan Hall. Reservations are to be in Oct. 24 and the registration fee will be $1.00 and the luncheon, $3.00. Mrs. William Summers is registration chairman. The theme will be "Christmas in October." She also reminded members that the fall flower show will be held in Washington C. H. Nov. 28.

The Twin Oaks members will be in charge of favors and name tags for the regional meeting, so the remaining time was spent making these.

Refreshments were served by the hostess to Mrs. Bonham, Mrs. Everett Baird, Mrs. Charles Blizzard, Mrs. Eugene Thompson, Mrs. Harold Bonecutter, Mrs. Dana Kellenberger, Mrs. Wilbur Hoppes and Mrs. Joe Bonham.

Mrs. Bonham will be hostess for the next meeting.

Browning Club program topic is 'Casa Guidi'

The Browning Club met in the home of Mrs. O.C. Jenkins. Mrs. Willard Bitzer, president, opened the meeting with the Club Collect and presided at the business session. She welcomed two guests: Mrs. James E. Nilan and Brenton C. Zimmerman, and three new members: Mrs. Everad Broberg, Mrs. E.F. Coberly and Mrs. Tranquillo Del Ponte.

Mrs. P.M. Cook read and commented on the poem, "Epilogue from Asolando," by Robert Browning.

Elsie Forman presented the program on Casa Guidi, the rooms in the apartment building, Palazzo Guidi, in Florence, Italy, where Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning occupied rooms on the floor above the ground floor for 14 years. While on a European tour this summer, she talked with Philip Kelley, executive secretary of the Browning Institute, Inc. and Mrs. Rena Kleefeld, treasurer of the Browning Institute, Inc.

These rooms were purchased in November, 1971, and plans are being made to restore the rooms and the furnishings as they were when occupied by the Brownings. The project will require contributions from organizations and friends and will extend over a period of many years.

Through the information from Philip Kelley, Mrs. Rena Kleefeld, and especially Mrs. Theodore S. Hope Jr., treasurer of the New York Browning Society, and the facts about each room which had been typed, framed, and placed on the walls, Miss Forman was able to give the latest plans for the restoration. Through the use of a large chart, pictures of the Brownings, the apartment building, the interior of the rooms, other items were displayed.

An architect-contractor, Nicholas Rucellai, who is either a grandson or a great grandson of a very close friend of Robert Browning, has been engaged to supervise the restoration. On August 2, another person had been interviewed who is planning to do the actual work of restoring.

In addition to the restoration of the Browning rooms, plans are being made to publish the letters of the Brownings which will consist probably of 35 volumes. Much information about the Brownings is being brought to light through these letters.

After the informative and interesting talk of her very recent visit to Casa Guidi, the officers of the Club served refreshments and the menbers enjoyed a social time.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At last count, 15 soap operas and 16 game shows were on the three TV networks on weekdays. But the familiar soap-and-games pattern could markedly change next season at CBS-TV.

Three half-hour daytime shows possibly may be replaced with a daily 90-minute effort bearing the all-purpose title of "CBS Daytime 90," according to B. Donald Grant, a top CBS executive.

But Grant, CBS' vice president for daytime program, emphasizes that such a move is by no means definite. He says it depends on how the network's current daytime shows hold up in the ratings this season.

However, he says his network probably will know by the end of November whether "CBS Daytime 90" will be ordered up as daily fare — or only once a month — for viewers during the 1974-75 season.

CBS' new daytime concept gets sort of a trial run next Thursday, when the network pre-empts "The Price is Right," "The Match Game" and "Secret Storm" for "Tiger on a Chain," a romantic melodrama about the homecoming of an Air Force pilot from a North Vietnamese prison camp.

It's the first of eight 90-minute daytime melodramas now planned. Grant says the seven others aren't scheduled yet, but CBS may show three more this season and the rest in summer and next fall.

If CBS goes the daily 90-minute route, he says, it probably would run similar melodramas on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Unlike soap operas, none of the shows will have continuing characters or stories.

Tuesdays and Thursdays probably would feature 90-minute series much like these on evening TV, each with a regular cast, he said.

Gilligan looking to 1976 drive?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In open political warfare with the state's Democratic administration, John Glenn quotes a top aide of Gov. John J. Gilligan as saying the governor might not serve out a four-year term if re-elected in 1974.

The former astronaut said John Hansan, Gilligan's administrative assistant, told him recently that the governor wanted Glenn to run for lieutenant governor. This would give Gilligan more flexibility in 1976, Glenn quoted Hansan as saying.

"He stated that what I give the governor is flexibility in '76: to run for national office, to run for the Senate, take a position in a new administration and otherwise serve out his term as governor, which would end in 1978," Glenn said.

The governor's office said Hansan would have no comment.

Glenn also accused the governor and state party leaders of bossism and of attempting to rig a U.S. Senate endorsement for Howard Metzenbaum of Cleveland.

Glenn, who wants to run for the U.S. Senate, said he turned down the proposal to run for lieutenant governor. He later assailed Gilligan and the state party organization in a speech before the Ohio Democratic Executive Committee.

Gilligan refused to discuss Glenn's charges. He said he would have no comment until Glenn repeats the charges face to face.

Glenn said he still is considering making the Senate race even without the party's blessing.

A movement has been launched by some Democrats, mostly legislators, to have William Ensign removed as chairman of the Ohio Youth Commission.

A leader in the group told The Associated Press they were afraid the one-time Toledo mayor would be an embarrassment to Gov. John J. Gilligan in next year's election.

Democrats fear Republicans will blow the parties out of proportion in next year's campaign speeches.

Department of Transportation Director J. Phillip Richley said any secretaries in his department who manned telephones to take pledges during the Democratic National Committee's fund-raising telethon did so voluntarily.

He said if any supervisor promised the girls a day off for working for the party that night they did so without authority.

"It wasn't necessary," Richley said. "We had more volunteers than we could use."

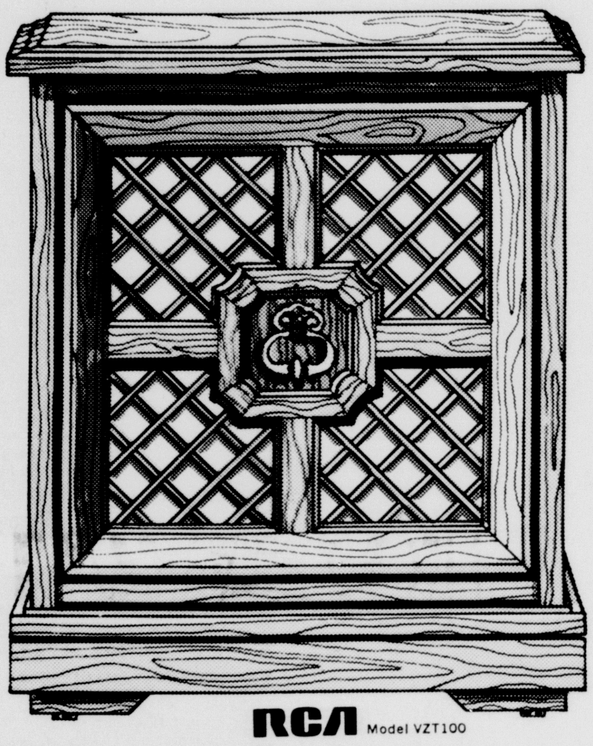

At least one DOT secretary said she was promised time off for helping out at the telethon. Richley said neither he nor Gov. John J. Gilligan would sanction such proposals.

Flying news

By Judy Dennis

Hi, again, friends!

It's been a busy two weeks for me, and I've been struggling to find time to gather my news. Our office manager at Ross County is on vacation, so I've been dividing my time between the two places.

Bill has been to New Mexico since my last article, flying there in our Cherokee. He was accompanied by John Woodmansee, Howard Wright and Tom Romph. They had expected to pick up a twin-engine Cessna and a single-engine Skyhawk. However the twin didn't come up to Bill's expectations so he purchased only the Skyhawk.

We held our annual Airport Picnic a week ago Sunday, with the best attendance ever. We had spot landing and "bombing" contests with 100 pilots, student pilots and their families enjoying the fun.

Millard French won both contests astonishing the on-lookers by setting the Cessna 150 right-ON the line as Millard flew a bomber during World War II.

After the contests were over, we all enjoyed a wiener roast and a sing-a-long around the campfire, accompanied by that accomplished banjo player Bob Woodmansee.

WE HAVE BEEN very busy the past two weeks spraying weeds in the farmers' beans. I saw the results of the spraying this afternoon when I accompanied Lloyd Anderson, one of the Ag pilots on an inpsection of a bean field on the Hazel Moyer farm. One corner was untouched due to surrounding farm buildings, but in the part that had been treated the weeds were dead.

We've had a little bad luck, the past week. On Thursday, some thieves broke into our Ross County Airport. Although they got very little for their trouble, as we don't leave cash overnight, still it was a nuisance getting the window replaced and straightening up.

Also I'm sorry to report extensive wind damage to the J-3 Cub owned by Eddie Pendergraft. The wing of Eddie's J-3 was nearly torn off during the storm Saturday night. The wind also bent a little rod on the wing of one of our trainers, grounding it for a day for repairs.

This made Sunday a little hectic, as we had to juggle students and planes in order to make up for the shortage of planes.

BOB WOODMANSEE has been very busy with his student cross-county flying, taking three cross-country flights in the past week.

John Woodmansee, and his wife Sandy, flew to a lake at Zanesville where they had a picnic lunch and Roy and Elizabeth Smith flew to Urbana for lunch.

Tex Guerra has been flying every evening it is fit, working on his Commercial license, and Tim Vehnekamp has been on two dual cross-county flights.

Howard Wright is working on his instrument rating and has about 12 hours towards the 45-hour minimum.

Walt Gooldin is getting close to flight test time and Jack Sanders has been working on the ground school films as well as his flying technique.

CONGRATULATIONS. are in order for Ned Payne, who made his first solo flight. Ray Valone and Gene Pfaff, coworkers for a construction firm have each been practicing landings - Ray with the instructor, and Gene solo. We've picked up another new student, and we're happy to welcome Bill Sever from Frankfort.

These old eyes are beginning to "give out" so I'll wrap up the news and say "So long for now".

Students turn from war to peace studies

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

For an increasing number of college students the study of peace has replaced the protest of war.

Today, 50 colleges and universities across the country offer major or minor programs in peace studies. Five years ago, at the height of the antiwar movement, only one school offered such courses.

At the University of Pennsylvania, students can obtain a doctorate in peace science. A year ago Colgate University established the first professorship of peace.

This fall, 300 campuses are using peace studies material, according to the Institute for World Order in New York City. Spokesmen said the institute receives some 250 inquiries per month from junior and senior high schools, which are also establishing courses of study.

"Our problem and excitement is that interest is growing so rapidly. It's been happening since about 1970," said Franklin Wallin, institute president.

Proponents of such studies don't discount the power of protest. They point to the Vietnam war and public opinion's role in the American withdrawal. But they are hopeful that the peace education movement will go beyond Vietnam.

The growing interest in peace studies stems in part from frustration of some who participated in the protests of the 1960s.

Joe Fahey, acting director of Manhattan College's Peace Studies Institute, said of protest in the 1960s:

"I realized that the problem of war was much deeper than the Vietnam war and protests were not enough to stop it. We decided to make peace our career."

Others see peace studies as part of a growing worldwide concern, building over the past few decades.

"These peace studies programs are part of a global, political and social movement. The bright, moral, pragmatic minds are coalescing. We may be at a moment in history where it's possible to abolish war," said Saul Mendlovitz, director of the World Order Models Project, an effort by teams of researchers around the globe to find better ways to live.

How does one study peace?

Courses vary greatly in subject matter, but most start with the premise that war is not inevitable, practical solutions can and must be found.

"The nature of the liberal arts program has been that war is an acceptible means of conflict resolution. It's become a predominant myth in society," said Chuck Appel, a 20-year-old senior at Manhattan College. "But you've got to teach that nonviolent resolution is the best way to solve problems."

The peace science approach is also interdisciplinary. One course may include math, history, government and psychology — in a rounded technique of problem-solving.

"In the past, sociology, economics, each had its own piecemeal approach. We felt the problem of world conflict requires a full attack," said Walter Isard, chairman of the peace science department at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Professors also stress that courses take a rigorous, unemotional look at world problems, and that facts and understanding — not rhetoric — are their tools.

Courses range from the University of Colorado's "Sociological Analysis of Revolution" to Harvard College's "History and Theory of Non-Violence."

Lalit Aggarwal, 29, the first candidate for a doctorate in peace science at Penn, is trying to develop a universally applicable framework for solving conflicts at all levels, urban to international.

As an architect and city planner, he felt solutions to urban disputes very inadequate.

"But it's not enough to just say, 'I don't like it.' One should be able to suggest a possible alternative. The program has helped me put my ideas in a more rigorous, precise form," said Aggarwal, who plans to work with an international agency when he completes his degree.

At Manhattan College some 17 courses with an emphasis on peace are offered in various departments. About 40 majors study such subjects as "War and Violence in Western Literature" and "Biology of Human Behavior."

The program is flourishing now on a campus with a strong ROTC contingent — and some radicals who grumbled when the peace major was established.

"The radicals thought we were too much a part of the establishment. We want to reform the system," said director Fahey. He added, however, that he doesn't discount civil disobedience, and teaches about Gandhi and Martin Luther King in his own course, "Religious Dimensions of Peace."

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At last count, 15 soap operas and 16 game shows were on the three TV networks on weekdays. But the familiar soap-and-games pattern could markedly change next season at CBS-TV.

Three half-hour daytime shows possibly may be replaced with a daily 90-minute effort bearing the all-purpose title of "CBS Daytime 90," according to B. Donald Grant, a top CBS executive.

But Grant, CBS' vice president for daytime program, emphasizes that such a move is by no means definite. He says it depends on how the network's current daytime shows hold up in the ratings this season.

However, he says his network probably will know by the end of November whether "CBS Daytime 90" will be ordered up as daily fare — or only once a month — for viewers during the 1974-75 season.

CBS' new daytime concept gets sort of a trial run next Thursday, when the network pre-empts "The Price is Right," "The Match Game" and "Secret Storm" for "Tiger on a Chain," a romantic melodrama about the homecoming of an Air Force pilot from a North Vietnamese prison camp.

It's the first of eight 90-minute daytime melodramas now planned. Grant says the seven others aren't scheduled yet, but CBS may show three more this season and the rest in summer and next fall.

If CBS goes the daily 90-minute route, he says, it probably would run similar melodramas on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Unlike soap operas, none of the shows will have continuing characters or stories.

Tuesdays and Thursdays probably would feature 90-minute series much like these on evening TV, each with a regular cast, he said.

Gilligan looking to 1976 drive?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In open political warfare with the state's Democratic administration, John Glenn quotes a top aide of Gov. John J. Gilligan as saying the governor might not serve out a four-year term if re-elected in 1974.

The former astronaut said John Hansan, Gilligan's administrative assistant, told him recently that the governor wanted Glenn to run for lieutenant governor. This would give Gilligan more flexibility in 1976, Glenn quoted Hansan as saying.

"He stated that what I give the governor is flexibility in '76: to run for national office, to run for the Senate, take a position in a new administration and otherwise serve out his term as governor, which would end in 1978," Glenn said.

The governor's office said Hansan would have no comment.

Glenn also accused the governor and state party leaders of bossism and of attempting to rig a U.S. Senate endorsement for Howard Metzenbaum of Cleveland.

Glenn, who wants to run for the U.S. Senate, said he turned down the proposal to run for lieutenant governor. He later assailed Gilligan and the state party organization in a speech before the Ohio Democratic Executive Committee.

Gilligan refused to discuss Glenn's charges. He said he would have no comment until Glenn repeats the charges face to face.

Glenn said he still is considering making the Senate race even without the party's blessing.

A movement has been launched by some Democrats, mostly legislators, to have William Ensign removed as chairman of the Ohio Youth Commission.

A leader in the group told The Associated Press they were afraid the one-time Toledo mayor would be an embarrassment to Gov. John J. Gilligan in next year's election.

Democrats fear Republicans will blow the parties out of proportion in next year's campaign speeches.

Department of Transportation Director J. Phillip Richley said any secretaries in his department who manned telephones to take pledges during the Democratic National Committee's fund-raising telethon did so voluntarily.

He said if any supervisor promised the girls a day off for working for the party that night they did so without authority.

"It wasn't necessary," Richley said. "We had more volunteers than we could use."

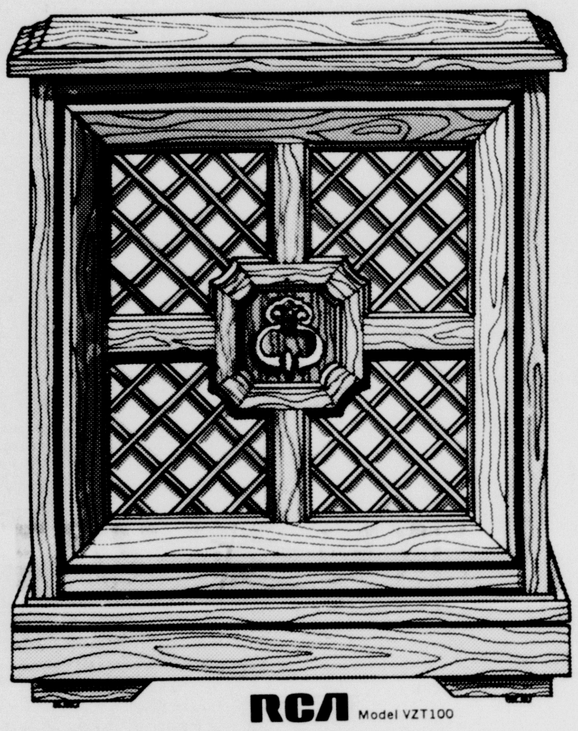

At least one DOT secretary said she was promised time off for helping out at the telethon. Richley said neither he nor Gov. John J. Gilligan would sanction such proposals.

Flying news

By Judy Dennis

Hi, again, friends!

It's been a busy two weeks for me, and I've been struggling to find time to gather my news. Our office manager at Ross County is on vacation, so I've been dividing my time between the two places.

Bill has been to New Mexico since my last article, flying there in our Cherokee. He was accompanied by John Woodmansee, Howard Wright and Tom Romph. They had expected to pick up a twin-engine Cessna and a single-engine Skyhawk. However the twin didn't come up to Bill's expectations so he purchased only the Skyhawk.

We held our annual Airport Picnic a week ago Sunday, with the best attendance ever. We had spot landing and "bombing" contests with 100 pilots, student pilots and their families enjoying the fun.

Millard French won both contests astonishing the on-lookers by setting the Cessna 150 right-ON the line as Millard flew a bomber during World War II.

After the contests were over, we all enjoyed a wiener roast and a sing-a-long around the campfire, accompanied by that accomplished banjo player Bob Woodmansee.

WE HAVE BEEN very busy the past two weeks spraying weeds in the farmers' beans. I saw the results of the spraying this afternoon when I accompanied Lloyd Anderson, one of the Ag pilots on an inpsection of a bean field on the Hazel Moyer farm. One corner was untouched due to surrounding farm buildings, but in the part that had been treated the weeds were dead.

We've had a little bad luck, the past week. On Thursday, some thieves broke into our Ross County Airport. Although they got very little for their trouble, as we don't leave cash overnight, still it was a nuisance getting the window replaced and straightening up.

Also I'm sorry to report extensive wind damage to the J-3 Cub owned by Eddie Pendergraft. The wing of Eddie's J-3 was nearly torn off during the storm Saturday night. The wind also bent a little rod on the wing of one of our trainers, grounding it for a day for repairs.

This made Sunday a little hectic, as we had to juggle students and planes in order to make up for the shortage of planes.

BOB WOODMANSEE has been very busy with his student cross-county flying, taking three cross-country flights in the past week.

John Woodmansee, and his wife Sandy, flew to a lake at Zanesville where they had a picnic lunch and Roy and Elizabeth Smith flew to Urbana for lunch.

Tex Guerra has been flying every evening it is fit, working on his Commercial license, and Tim Vehnekamp has been on two dual cross-county flights.

Howard Wright is working on his instrument rating and has about 12 hours towards the 45-hour minimum.

Walt Gooldin is getting close to flight test time and Jack Sanders has been working on the ground school films as well as his flying technique.

CONGRATULATIONS. are in order for Ned Payne, who made his first solo flight. Ray Valone and Gene Pfaff, coworkers for a construction firm have each been practicing landings - Ray with the instructor, and Gene solo. We've picked up another new student, and we're happy to welcome Bill Sever from Frankfort.

These old eyes are beginning to "give out" so I'll wrap up the news and say "So long for now".

Students turn from war to peace studies

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

For an increasing number of college students the study of peace has replaced the protest of war.

Today, 50 colleges and universities across the country offer major or minor programs in peace studies. Five years ago, at the height of the antiwar movement, only one school offered such courses.

At the University of Pennsylvania, students can obtain a doctorate in peace science. A year ago Colgate University established the first professorship of peace.

This fall, 300 campuses are using peace studies material, according to the Institute for World Order in New York City. Spokesmen said the institute receives some 250 inquiries per month from junior and senior high schools, which are also establishing courses of study.

"Our problem and excitement is that interest is growing so rapidly. It's been happening since about 1970," said Franklin Wallin, institute president.

Proponents of such studies don't discount the power of protest. They point to the Vietnam war and public opinion's role in the American withdrawal. But they are hopeful that the peace education movement will go beyond Vietnam.

The growing interest in peace studies stems in part from frustration of some who participated in the protests of the 1960s.

Joe Fahey, acting director of Manhattan College's Peace Studies Institute, said of protest in the 1960s:

"I realized that the problem of war was much deeper than the Vietnam war and protests were not enough to stop it. We decided to make peace our career."

Others see peace studies as part of a growing worldwide concern, building over the past few decades.

"These peace studies programs are part of a global, political and social movement. The bright, moral, pragmatic minds are coalescing. We may be at a moment in history where it's possible to abolish war," said Saul Mendlovitz, director of the World Order Models Project, an effort by teams of researchers around the globe to find better ways to live.

How does one study peace?

Courses vary greatly in subject matter, but most start with the premise that war is not inevitable, practical solutions can and must be found.

"The nature of the liberal arts program has been that war is an acceptible means of conflict resolution. It's become a predominant myth in society," said Chuck Appel, a 20-year-old senior at Manhattan College. "But you've got to teach that nonviolent resolution is the best way to solve problems."

The peace science approach is also interdisciplinary. One course may include math, history, government and psychology — in a rounded technique of problem-solving.

"In the past, sociology, economics, each had its own piecemeal approach. We felt the problem of world conflict requires a full attack," said Walter Isard, chairman of the peace science department at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Professors also stress that courses take a rigorous, unemotional look at world problems, and that facts and understanding — not rhetoric — are their tools.

Courses range from the University of Colorado's "Sociological Analysis of Revolution" to Harvard College's "History and Theory of Non-Violence."

Lalit Aggarwal, 29, the first candidate for a doctorate in peace science at Penn, is trying to develop a universally applicable framework for solving conflicts at all levels, urban to international.

As an architect and city planner, he felt solutions to urban disputes very inadequate.

"But it's not enough to just say, 'I don't like it.' One should be able to suggest a possible alternative. The program has helped me put my ideas in a more rigorous, precise form," said Aggarwal, who plans to work with an international agency when he completes his degree.

At Manhattan College some 17 courses with an emphasis on peace are offered in various departments. About 40 majors study such subjects as "War and Violence in Western Literature" and "Biology of Human Behavior."

The program is flourishing now on a campus with a strong ROTC contingent — and some radicals who grumbled when the peace major was established.

"The radicals thought we were too much a part of the establishment. We want to reform the system," said director Fahey. He added, however, that he doesn't discount civil disobedience, and teaches about Gandhi and Martin Luther King in his own course, "Religious Dimensions of Peace."

Cambodian refugee tide swelling

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — That part of Cambodia still under government control is on its way to becoming a vast refugee camp.

The statistics tell you that: more than a million Cambodians — one in every seven — displaced by the war and in need of help, barely a corner of the country left untouched by the human uprooting.

You see it in any direction you travel: families trudging along the sides of highways, their property shrunken to what they can pile onto the twowheeled, cattle-drawn carts.

People, most of them farmers living in small villages, flee their homes in the face of rebel attacks or when their homegrounds become battlegrounds between insurgent and government forces.

They don't go farther than they have to, but often that means long treks to Phnom Penh or distant provincial capitals where handouts or jobs are more readily available and the prospects for safety greater.

Some return to their homes only to be driven out again. Others become refugees whose status one American aid official described as "temporary on an indefinite basis."

"When they flee from their villages, they carry some of the family valuables. They sell them and can live on that for one or two months perhaps," says Loeung Nal, the minister for refugees. "After that, they have nothing and somebody must take care of them. The longer the war lasts the greater the problem becomes."

The minister admitted the government cannot now meet the needs of the refugees or solve the mammoth economic, social and political problems arising from a population oneseventh adrift.

This year, the government has set aside a fraction of one per cent of planned national expenditures for refugee care. It comes to $124,000, or about 12 cents a refugee a year.

Government efforts thus far have focused on rice distribution and housing for refugees in the Phnom Penh area, leaving most problems of the provinces in the hands of local authorities.

"We can only hope to provide enough so that they will not die," Nal said.

As with guns and butter, the Cambodian government relies on the United States and other countries for large infusions of aid for its refugee program.

The U.S. government has budgeted $4 million in such aid for Cambodia this fiscal year but one embassy official said, "We don't want to set up a vast aid apparatus like we had in Vietnam."

Jeff PTC makes plans for Fall Festival

JEFFERSONVILLE — The Jeffersonville Parent-Teacher Club has approved a $25 contribution to the campaign for the $2,036,000 bond issue proposal for a Miami Trace District middle school which will come to a vote at the Nov. 6 election.

The action was taken from Kenneth Payton and Marvin DeMent, of the school board, and Phil Grover had explained the need for new construction. Mrs. Phyllis Richards, a county Health Department nurse, also appealed to the PTC for its support of the .2-mill public health levy, also up for decision by the voters.

Mrs. Danny Snyder, general chairman, announced the committee heads for the Fall Festival at the school Oct. 27: Mrs. Wayne Rayburn, games and prizes; Mrs. Larry Garringer, kitchen; Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Sams, additional games and prizes; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Steen country store; Mrs. Eddie McBee, cake and doll walk; Mrs. Gordon McCarty, turkey tickets; Mr. and Mrs. Geore Renick, candy; Mr. and Mrs. Dick Robinson, baby pictures; and the first and second grade teachers, selection of "Mr. and Mrs. Fall Festival."

Mrs. Douglas Stayrook, the music teacher, thanked the PTC for the new piano, and Terry Richards expressed appreciation for the new lockers for the boys rest rooms.

Mrs. June Slaughter, Miami Trace District elementary school coordinator, reported on progress being made on the "Volunteers for Reachout" program and asked mothers to give an hour a week to help at the schools.

Following the business session, a program was presented by the first and second grade pupils under the direction of their teachers.

Doughnuts and cider were served after the program by Mr. and Mrs. Joe King and Mrs. Wilmah Lower.

The next meeting will be Nov. 5 when third and fourth grade students will present the program and a film on "Mulligan Stew" will be shown. On the refreshments committee are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spears and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Geer.

Spring farm problems proving 'blessing' to elevator operators

By HOWARD HARPER

Last spring Fayette County's grain farmers had their problems. They were plagued by rains, which first delayed planting and then, after the seed was in the ground and had sprouted, more rains filled hundreds of acres of low ground with miniature lakes, which drowned the young soybean and corn plants.

It was a discouraging predicament for the farmers, but they finally saw their grain on well drained fields come through, although it had taken weeks beyond the normal sowing date to get the seed planted and, thus, spread the planting over many weeks. While the grain in some fields was well up, the seed was not yet even in the ground in others.

NOW the farmers' early trials and tribulations may be a blessing for the elevator operators.

Had the corn and soybeans come along normally, the two harvests, at about the same time, it could have poured grain into the elevators faster than the operators could get freight cars to haul it away to the terminal elevators.

But with the harvest being spread out over many weeks, elevator operators are having no serious shipping problems — yet. But they are keeping their fingers crossed. They say they understand the railroads don't have a surplus of cars and why they are not delivered until long after they have been ordered—sometimes as long as a month or more. But, they take comfort from the rain-delayed planting that has resulted in lengthening the harvest and the need for many more railroad cars in a shorter period. One operator said "we'll be getting soybeans in until after frost, and some corn will be coming in after Christmas." Normally, the harvest of the two crops would be virtually completed within a few weeks.

THEY POINT OUT, for example, that some fields of soybeans (and corn, too) have been harvested, while across the fence in the next field both crops are still green and far from mature.

No accurate figures on the soybean or corn acreage in the county are available at the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office here, but some educated guesses are that there are around 70,000 acres of soybeans and that the average yield will be around 30 to 35 bushels per acre. (The average was cut by the hundreds of acres drowned out last spring.) This would mean that the elevators would have had to handle, under normal conditions, more than 2,000,000 bushels of soybeans in a short harvest period. The same condition applies, in a general way, to corn also.

THERE CAN be no doubt that more soybeans were planted in Fayette County this year than ever before; and it's the same across the country. This has come about, economists say, because of a growing demand, both for export and for new uses for soybeans. In view of this increased demand, soybean prices skyrocketed to a peak of little more than $11.00 a bushel last summer. But since then they have dropped to around $5.75 this week, still not bad and considerably more than a year ago.

The soybean acreage was increased partly at the expense of corn and to an overall increase in crop acreage but the corn market is holding up fairly well at around $2.15 a bushel.

On the brighter side, prospects for bumper yields are good for both where the grain was not drowned out or stunted by abnormal spring rains.

False report brings fine

A Washington C. H. man, arrested for reporting false information to a police officer, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 90 days in jail by Acting Municipal Judge John P. Case Thursday.

A Bloomingburg youth was found guilty of possession of marijuana, and another man was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 60 days for larceny.

John Forsha Jr., 42, of 123 Oak St., voluntarily came to the Police Department during the investigation of a grand larceny last week and gave a statement. Further investigation into the matter disclosed that his statement had been false and had been intended to cover his own involvement in the incident. He was then arrested and charged. Judge Case suspended the jail term pending good behavior for two years.

Lawrence L. Hagler, 19, Bloomingburg, was fined $250 and costs and was given a suspended 30-day jail term for possession of marijuana. He was arrested by sheriff's deputies when he was seen drinking alcoholic beverage in an automobile, for which he was fined another $25 and costs. While making the arrest, the officer found a package of marijuana in the car.

Judge Case suspended 44 days of a 60-day jail term handed down to Eldon L. Wilson, 21, of 108 E. Market St., for the theft of $42 from the Waters Supply Co., 1206 S. Fayette St. In addition to the jail term Wilson, who was apprehended by sheriff's deputies Wednesday, was fined $100 and costs.

Henry C. Mongold, 1013 Willard St., was fined $50 and costs for dumping trash in the area of Paint Creek. He was arrested on a warrant signed by Jerry F. Cremeans, area wildlife agent.

Traffic Court

Three persons arrested for driving without operator's licenses were found guilty in Municipal Court Thursday afternoon with acting Municipal Judge P. Case presiding. Each of those charged was cited for another violation as well.

Ann M. Avelo, 22, Bloomingburg, was fined a total of $250 and costs and was sentenced to 30 days in jail when she was found guilty of driving while intoxicated and without an operator's license. Twenty days of the jail term were suspended pending good behavior for one year.

Ronnie J. Duncan was fined $150 and costs for driving without an operator's license and reckless operation. He received a suspended 30-day jail sentence.

Jerry W. Harper, 24, of 610½ Washington Ave., was fined $200 and costs for displaying fictitious license plates and driving without an operator's license.

Eight persons forfeited bond when they failed to appear.

POLICE

Harold J. Conrad, 31, New Holland, $23, speeding.

Kennel Club plans winter puppy match

BLOOMINGBURG — Reports on the weekly obedience classes and preparations for the winter puppy match were discussed at the October meeting of the Paint Valley Kennel Club at a potluck supper held Thursday night in the Bloomingburg Town Hall.

Robert Schneider, president of the Paint Valley Kennel Club, said reports were heard on the successful obedience training classes held each Monday at the Fairground for the past 10 weeks. He said 25 dogs have been enrolled and six more obedience classes are scheduled.

Plans for the January puppy match, an event open to purebred dogs, were discussed.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

The arrival of a ninth grandchild recently called for another appearance at a hospital with camera in hand. It was a joyous occasion, one to be recorded in pictures for the family albums.

By now, incidentally, we have separate grandchildren albums, an exclusive domain for their pictorial activities.

I had no problem taking pictures on the maternity ward. The newborn babies were safe behind the glassed-in windows and all picture taking was done by natural light and without flash.

The safety-glass window, by the way, had a wire screen pattern in it but by pressing the camera lens against the glass, it disappears entirely and only the scene beyond is seen.

The brightly lit nursery permitted an exposure of 1-60th second at f6.3 on fast black-and-white film. Color pictures by available light were also possible though I didn't take any.

FORTUNATELY, our newest granddaughter's crib was next to the window so use of a normal 50 mm lens produced a bit enough image. By luck, an aide was attending to the baby when I started shooting and she cooperatively held her up for a better view.

I recall a previous blessed event in which the baby's crib was farhter away and it required a 135mm telephoto lens to get a viewable grandchild picture.

To round out a picture story of the event, I also focused on our daughter in her room reading congratulatory cards, arranging the flowers, admiring her daughter through the nursery window and surrounded by family visitors.

The camera was also a witness when father brought mother and baby home from the hospital and the new one met her older sister and brother. A final photo in the "blessed event" sequence was of the new baby asleep in her own crib at home..... looking tinier than ever.

A baby's birth is such a happy occasion and so picture worthy that it's hard to realize that some hospitals do not permit cameras or picture taking by parents or visitors.

I BECAME AWARE of it some grandchildren ago and it shocked me.

When a hospital guard stopped me at the visitors' entrance and said my quite visible camera was not allowed, I asked to see someone in authority.

I was taken to the head nurse and asked her why I couldn't take my new grandson's picture.

"It's a rule of this hospital," she replied.

"Flash might affect a baby's eyes," another nurse in the room said.

"As you see, I have no flash," I pointed out. "I'm aware that flash might present a problem in a hospital. But I plan to shoot only by natural light from behind a plate glass window. All types of visitors are allowed to look at the babies and there is no contact of any kind, so why can't I photograph what I can see?

"Aside from the baby, I'm permitted to visit my daughter and can hug and kiss her. Then why can't I take a picture of her? It isn't an invasion of privacy because she wants and has asked for photos of this special event. Taking pictures doesn't endanger the health or well-being of either mother or baby. And it doesn't interfere in any way with hsopital routine or a nurse's duties. So why isn't photography allowed?"

"I can only repeat," the head nurse said, "It's a hospital rule!"

SINCE NO justification for the rule was given, on leaving the nurse's office I continued up to the maternity ward..... but the camera was carried inconspicuously.

I took my daughter's picture in her room. Then she walked me to the nursery window where she acted as a shield while I photographer her first-born son. When I visited again, the camera was in a gift box, out of sight of the guard.

I took other photos but I deeply resented having to do so surreptitiously. I felt there was no justification or explanation for this attempt to abridge my freedom to photograph a momentous event in the life of a loved one.

The following day, there was a possible explanation for the hospital rule. My daughter was given a proof of a photograph of her baby along with an order blank from the "official photographer" connected with the hospital.

IT LEADS ONE to guess that the hospital rule forbidding cameras was to protect a financial arrangement with a commercial photographer by eliminating any possible competition from parents..... or grandparents.

I'm happy to report that after two such experiences, my daughters found hospitals that not only had excellent medical maternity facilities but were pictorially enlightened, photographically speaking.

Hospitals should know that our blessed events are matters of public record but they also deserve a place in the permanent archives of family albums.

"HI GRANDPA! Go ahead and take the picture—this hospital doesn't mind." A blessed event is a happy one that should be photographed and preserved in the family archives. Here's one-day-old Ali Lorin Gi[illegible] being held up by a cooperative nurse's aide to make a better picture.

Little boy fights throat tumors

MIDDLESBORO, Ky. (AP)— Jimmy Weaver is a happy little fellow, like most 2-year-olds. But unlike most, he needs a throat operation every month to stay alive.

His mother, Angela Weaver of Middlesboro, recalls that Jimmy had no apparent problem until he was about four months old, when he began to lose his voice. Soon he was unable to cry audibly.

Treatments with antibiotics were ineffective.

Five months later, Dr. Albert Cullum of Middlesboro operated on Jimmy's throat. He found and removed some viral tumors about the size of small warts that were blocking Jimmy's breathing passage.

But the tumors, or papilloma, began to grow back, and Jimmy's body apparently didn't offer normal resistance to them.

Nine months later, in December 1972, Jimmy needed a second operation to remove the growths, and the need accelerated.

Jimmy has since had the papilloma removed 13 times, three times by Dr. Cullum and 10 times, with a laser beam, by Dr. Stewart Strong at Boston University Hospital.

During the last two months, an operation was needed about every 10 days. The last operation, by Dr. Cullum, was an emergency procedure.

At that time, Jimmy was fitted with an artificial silver trachea, a tube running from the front of his neck into his throat. The tube has reduced the operations to about one a month.

Mrs. Weaver must watch Jimmy 24 hours a day, and clear the tube at least four times a day. She tells of waking up many times to find her child struggling for air, a shattering experience for both.

Despite all this, she says, "He's happy and healthy, and he plays pretty well." The most disturbing thing for Jimmy, she adds, is being unable to speak.

The doctors hope the laser treatments at Boston will slow the growths, Mrs. Weaver says. But so far they haven't, and monthly operations must continue until the tumors stop growing.

Compromise seen unlikely on reforms

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. John J. Gilligan said Thursday he saw no hopes for a compromise in a committee studying campaign reforms, but he believes the full legislature in a special session can come up with a good law.

Republicans and Democrats divided evenly Wednesday night over corporate and union political contributions. Republicans want to let union members designate which party or candidate their political contributions will go to.

Gilligan, in Toledo, said there is no comparison between corporate and union contributions.

"We want to discourage the fat cats and keep the fast money boys out of the field," he said. "We want to encourage all citizens to contribute a dollar or two or five or 10 to the political process to keep it running."

The 14-member Legislative Service Commission Committee, evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats, was trying to come up with a proposal to put before the special session Oct. 23,

Blasts level Irondale school; probe underway

IRONDALE, Ohio (AP)— There was no school today for 210 elementary school students here whose 51-year-old classroom building was leveled by a series of mysterious explosions and a fire Thursday.

Irondale school officials said they were looking for suitable classroom space in order to hold school elsewhere Monday.

Fire officials said they still were investigating the cause of the explosions, which shook the building early Thursday morning. Firemen said no one was injured. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

A newer, adjoining building suffered smoke and water damage but survived the fire, firemen said. The fire and explosions occurred in a portion of the older building used to store supplies.

Hear testimony in Hoffman case

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—A state ballistics expert told the first-degree murder trial of Howard Thomas Hoffman III Thursday that Hoffman's parents were killed by bullets fired from a gun once owned by their son.

The prosecution rested its case shortly after the testimony, and Lucas County Common Pleas Court Judge immediately recessed the 14-day proceedings until Tuesday.

The prosecution's decision to end its case came abruptly and was unexpected. Only 77 of the 191 witnesses subpoened had testified.

Don't start removing the finish from an old piece of furniture unless you have made up your mind that it's likely to be a messy chore.

Once in a great while, when a wooden object has a single coat of varnish or paint on it, the finish can be taken off quickly and easily with one of the wipe on-wipe off types of removers. Most of the time, however, the old finish is made up of many coats, applied at different times over the years, or a series of three coats applied on a single occasion.

Either way, the removal job is almost certain to be arduous, involving applying the remover, scraping it off and, in some cases, using a bleach to restore the wood to its natural color.

Troublesome as it is, the removal of an old finish can be very satisfying, revealing the beauty of the wood and the chance to refinish it as you wish. When the new, usually clear finish is put on, the result more often than not is good enough to inspire you to tackle a similar job on another piece of furniture.

But when you are in the middle of the project, you're likely to have some qualms about having started it in the first place.

Varnish remover (or paint remover; it's the same thing) is put on with a brush, applied generously with full-flowing strokes. Use more of the flat of the brush than the tips of the bristles.

The container will tell you how long to wait for the particular brand you are using. It's usually between 15 minutes and half an hour.

AFTER the waiting period, take a putty knife and scrape a small portion of the surface. If the old finish, which will have become bubbly and wrinkled, can be scraped off fairly easily, go ahead with the rest of the surface.

If there is too much resistance and you are able to remove only a little of the finish, it means that the remover has not penetrated deeply enough or that more remover is required.

Wait another 10 minutes, then test again. If it is still evident that the finish is not coming off, apply another coat of the remover right over the first one. Wait the required time period, then begin scraping again.

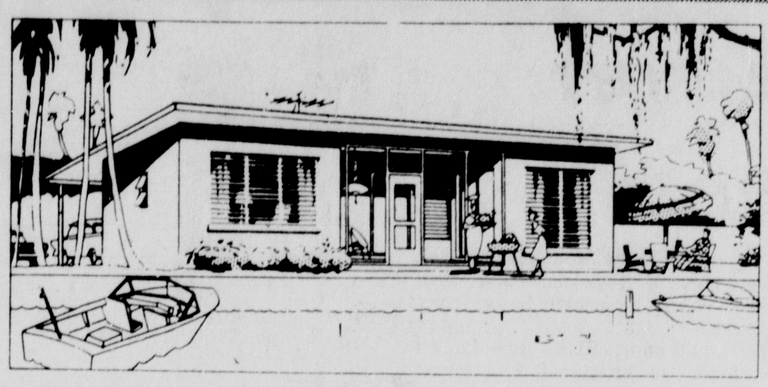

Always hold the putty knife so that the blade is almost horizontal. If held vertically, there is a chance that the blade will take off part of the wood as well as the finish.

DESPITE your work and your patience, you may find at the conclusion of the scraping that some color still remains in the wood.

Steel wool or sand the surface and see if that does any good. If not, it is necessary to use a commercial bleach unless you plan to finish the surface with paint rather than a clear finish. If the wood is to be painted, the traces of remaining color will not affect the result.

Since both the remover and the bleach are chemicals, wear gloves when using them.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THE FEATURE of this waterfront home is the third bedroom-suitable for renting for housing winter guests. There is a complete bathroom facility, two closets and the access is unrelated to the access to the main bedrooms. Another feature of this retirement house is the living-dining area visually separate from the kitchen. The kitchen does share the general air space of the living-dining room. The kitchen also has a round skydome. This is an all-masonry house reasonably safe against hurricanes; the wide eaves of the shed roof protect the windows from excessive summer sun. Plan HA799R has 1,080 square feet and was designed by Jan Reiner, 1000 52nd St. North, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33710. Anyone interested in learning the cost of the blueprint can write to the architect, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Labor dispute long and bitter

NEW HAVEN, W.Va. (AP) — A strike at Appalachian Power Co.'s Philip Sporn plant in this Ohio River community seems a throwback to the days when fierce labor struggles were commonplace in West Virginia.

The more than three-month dispute has been the occasion for beatings, bullets, accusations and the detonation of a bomb at the plant.

On July 1, 216 members of Utility Workers Union of America Local 426 walked off their jobs at the facility, which produces power for northern Mason County.

Union members struck at generating plants on both sides of the Ohio all the way north to Wheeling when the UWUA's two-year contract expired.

"We had 5,000 men on strike," said Local 426 President Carl Searls. "We only got strike benefits for two weeks and that was just $10 a week for each man."

"Since then," he said, "some of the families are living on food stamps and some of the men and their wives have gone out and got part time jobs to keep food on the table and shoes on the children."

Since the strike began, the Mason County Sheriff's office has handled dozens of complaints of cable cutting and auto stonings at the Sporn plant, and several power blackouts were attributed to sabotage of electrical equipment.

Philip Sporn officials have offered $35,000 awards for information leading to the conviction of persons involved in the violence, hired independent security guards and warned workers that if they were replaced they would not be given back their jobs after a settlement is reached.

"They say they've hired 14 new employes," said Searls, "but it's obvious they're just trying to break the union. They're trying to starve us out."

Last week, the action got so heavy that Mason County Circuit Court Judge James Thompson found both sides in contempt of court and ordered them to stop harassing each other.

The long, bitter struggle adds a new dimension next week with the addition of a federal mediator.

Man uses bread for art forms

He's crafted museum-piece jewelry out of pretzels, created bleeding loaves of bread and asked 1,200 people to saw, hammer, throw and eat their way through two tons of bread.

"Dough is like flesh. It's extremely sensual to play with. Baking is a turn-on beyond belief," said Fischer.

Fischer has stuck with bread and it's far from a put-on. His works have commanded as much as $3,000. He began 13 years ago with prebaked loaves, attaching handles to make "portable" bread.

"Part of the interest was in putting the bread in a different context and changing its function completely," said Fischer, who was born in Belgium and influenced by surrealists there.

He moved into extravaganzas in the 1960s—like baking a solid 100-foot loaf, running it through an open-ended oven on a conveyer belt in San Antonio, Tex.

His latest effort is a series of large sculptures which will be on exhibit at the New York Cultural Center this week. Among them are rich-brown textured pieces of a man's torso, hands and legs.

He'll also be on hand for an outdoor baking festival in New York's Central Park on Saturday to celebrate the fourth annual National Day of Bread.

"Bread is hard outside and soft inside, like people. It's always been symbolic," said Fischer.

In his current exhibit, a huge pair of legs, baked around wire mesh, are priced at $3,000. If cast in bronze, they are $5,000. The hands, encased in plexiglass boxes, are $1,000. His "Monument," a tall, fat bunch of loaves strapped together, is $2,500.

Bluegrass lawns generally stay green longest in autumn. Bluegrass does not suffer from light freezes and in most parts of the country only the leaf tips singe until after Christmas.

Few turfs are hardier and more self-reliant than Kentucky Bluegrass, or combinations of bluegrass and fine fescue.

Bluegrass blends planted in autumn grow very well because of warm soil, good air temperature and moisture balance. Bluegrass seedings are best sowed into a loosened soilbed.

The tiny seeds sift into crevices between soil particles. A "pebbled" surface accommodates seed well and accepts rain or watering better than does a dusty surface.

For new seedlings, to protect the soil and retard evaporation, mulch with a thin layer of clean straw, wood chips, woven netting or an excelsior mat. A damp seedbed plus bright autumn days make bluegrass mixtures sprout quickly. Generally, you won't have to remove the mulch. It will gradually decay where it is.

New fertilizer requirements go along with the new fine fescues, bluegrasses and bentgrasses that are changing lawn complexions.

The breeding programs that provided the new varieties were conducted under conditions of sufficient fertility to encourage good color and year-round growth.

Most bentgrasses, including Highland, and newer bluegrasses such as Fylking, Merion, Pennstar and Prato, should be fed more liberally than older varieties.

For mimimal care lawns,,the experts advise natural Kentucky bluegrass or traditional varieties such as Arboretum, Kenblue and Park. Fine fescues such as Chewings, Highlight, Illahee, Penlawn and Ruby also are enduring. They like balanced feeding but not excessive nitrogen in hot weather.

We suggest giving your lawn a feeding in September, another in October or a double dose in between. Normal recommendations on the fertilizer bag run from about 1 pound of nitrogen to each 1,000 feet (3 pounds of a fertilizer containing 33 per cent nitrogen).

The grass will thicken and be ready for a fast spring start. If you feed liberally in autumn, spring feeding can wait until the early growth surge passes.

Fescues are popular, used often in bluegrass blends to provide durable cover under difficult conditions. Fescue helps out in the shade under trees, where the soil dries out and where fertility is poor.

Pennlawn (from Pennsylvania State University) comes from disease-resistant parent stock. It is well adapted to the East.

A European creeping fescue is Ruby; Wintergreen from Michigan State; Jamestown, resistant to salt, from Rhode Island, and Dawson, and Dawson, Koket and Sceempter from Europe.

Senate recess wouldn't delay adjournment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leaders say a two-week recess of the Senate planned for later this month will not delay congressional adjournment.

They moved the target for ending the session of Congress back two weeks, to mid-November. However, the Senate Democrats said Wednesday, the latest delay is because the House doesn't expect to complete work on the massive defense appropriations bill until early next month.

The House will stay in session, and so will, leaders of both houses hope, the Senate-House conference committees seeking to reconcile key money bills that must be passed before adjournment.

School lunch plan set

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill tying increased federal support for school lunches too rising food costs has been worked out by Senate and House conferees.

The bill would increase the federal share for each school lunch from eight to 10 cents. It also would double the number of children eligible for reduced-price lunches by changing income requirements.

The compromise reached Tuesday requires that the federal share would be raised automatically if the cost of restaurant food rises. The increase would be figured every six months, beginning Jan. 1.

The measure, which now goes to the House and Senate for final consideration, would raise the federal share of the program by about $230 million, not including the escalator clause.

The program, which includes breakfasts in some schools, free milk and other nutrition aids, cost the federal government $1.5 billion last year. Poor children are provided lunches at reduced prices and the poorest receive free meals.

Q. — I intend to make a chopping board for the kitchen in our house. What kind of wood should I use?

A. — Maple.

Q. — I will be in the market soon for a radial arm saw. Can you tell me what they cost?

A. — The range is very wide — from about $100 to $400, depending on several factors, including the size of the blade. The simplest way to find out is to go shopping in several different stores.

Q. — There is a white film on about a dozen bricks on one side of our house. What is it and how can it be removed?

A. — It's called efflorescence. It's a salt deposit which is brought to the surface by water.

Scrub the stains with a wire brush. Sometimes this will do the trick. If it doesn't, scrub with a solution of muriatic acid. This is a strong chemical and must be used with great care and while wearing rubber gloves.

After the stain has been removed, coat the area with a clear silicone sealer.

Since the salt is washed out with water, find out how the water is getting into the masonry. Check for loose mortar especially.

It might also be that excessive moisture inside the house is getting behind the exterior walls and causing the trouble. This is very likely if the wall which is stained is in the area of the kitchen or bathroom.

Q. — Can I install resilient floor tiles over old ones? Do I use the same adhesive as I did when I put down the original tiels seven years ago?

A. — Yes to both questions. It is important that the old tiles be securely attached, since if any of them become loose, the new tiles will be dislodged.

Also, remember that the new installation will raise the level of the floor. You may have to plane or sand off the bottom of one or more doors so they can be closed easily.

Q. — I am putting a new veneer top on a dining room table. After I took off the old split top, I found the surface covered with dried-up old glue. I have scrubbed and scraped it without getting off more than half of it. Any ideas?

A. — Old glue can often be softened with diluted household vinegar. Scrape as soon as the glue begins to soften. If you wait too long it will harden again.

Reds brace for NL playoff series

Billingham meets Seaver in Saturday's lidlifter

CINCINNATI (AP) — Heavy rains washed out a scheduled Cincinnati Reds practice Thursday, leaving the defending National League champs in a combative mood as they awaited the New York Mets and the league playoffs.

"Let's get it on," roared little Joe Morgan. "I'm tired of everybody asking us how we feel about facing the Mets. I think people ought to ask the Mets how they feel about playing us. We're the team that won 99 games."

"We ain't scared of nobody," added Morgan, testily.

The National League playoffs, a best-of-5 affair between the Western Division champion Reds and the Eastern Division winning Mets, open Saturday at 4 p.m.

"They've got the momentum is what I hear," said Rose, mostly for the benefit of Morgan's ears.

"That's all I've been hearing lately," said Morgan. "Let's get it on and then we'll see."

"If they've got so much momentum, they don't need the practice," needled Rose.

"I'm not Jean Dixon. I don't predict things — I just make things happen," said the Reds leftfielder who has assured himself of a third National League batting title with a .338.

The Reds, who fashioned baseball's best record — 99-63 — with a remarkable closing rush that produced 60 victoriew in the last 86 games, defeated the Mets in eight of 12 meetings.

New York, like Cincinnati, had to come from an 11-game deficit to claim its division title. Hobbled by injuries much of the way, the Mets surged back by winning 24 of their last 34 games.

"If we get moved to that division next year, it will be no contest," said Perez, who completed his best season with a .312 batting average and 101 runs batted in.

The Mets arrived late Thursday night and were scheduled to practice from 5 to 7 p.m.

The threat of showers diminished today. The forecast for Saturday promised sunny weather, according to the Weather Bureau.

Grid prophet picks Browns over Cincy

Counted out as championship contenders in many preseason estimates, the Vikings and Cowboys each have put together three straight victories and head into the fourth weekend of the 1973 National Football League season as two of the four unbeaten and untied teams. The others are the Pittsburgh Steelers and the surprising Los Angeles Rams.

The downfall of both the Vikings and the Cowboys, so the preseason guessing went, would come from aging defensive units—Dallas' Doomsday Defense and the Vikings' Purple Gang.

Dallas has yielded 30 points in three games, Minnesota 32.

The Vikings face the Detroit Lions, a team that Minnesota has mangled the last 10 times the two met, on Sunday. The Cowboys play the Washington Redskins in the Monday night television game. Both Minnesota and Dallas are on the road.

Will these two teams play like they've been playing...or like they were expected to before the season started?

Before attempting to answer these and other pressing questions, let's quietly whisper that last week's Fearless Forecast was a lousy seven right, six wrong. That dropped the average to .703 with a 26-112 showing.

Minnesota (3-0) at Detroit (11-1) — The Vikings are favored to make it 11 straight over the Lions. But all good things must come to an end sometimes, so...LIONS 24, VIKINGS 21.

San Diego (1-2) at Pittsburgh (3-0) — The Steelers' defense against scoring, best in the American Conference, has given up seven fewer points than the Cowboys, best in the NFC. No wonder the Chargers are 18-point underdogs. Who can argue with that spread. STEELERS 30, CHARGERS 10.

Los Angeles (3-0) at Houston (0-3) — Can you think of any reason why it won't be 4-0 and 0-4 after this Sunday, even if Sid Gillman, the Houston general manager, is helping out with the Oiler offense? RAMS 42, OILERS 21.

Cincinnati (2-1) at Cleveland (2-1) — Cleveland's offense hasn't scored a touchdown in nine quarters but Don Cockroft's field goals gave the Browns a victory last week. The Bengals are having problems, too. In this bitter Ohio rivalry all but one of the games have been decided by four points or less. Cleveland is at home, because of the baseball playoffs, so...BROWNS 24, BENGALS 21.

New York Jets (1-2) at Miami (2-1) — Another game switched because of the baseball playoffs. It might have been interesting if Broadway Joe was playing. Bob Griese and Company by about any margin they want. DOLPHINS 35, JETS 20.

Denver (1-2) at Kansas City (2-1) — Don't count Kansas City out. That was the warning the Chiefs gave Oakland last week. The Broncos, meanwhile, had seven turnovers against the Bears. CHIEFS 31, BRONCOS 24.

Philadelphia (0-2-1) at Buffalo (2-1) — Look who's tied for first place in the AFC East with the Miami Dolphins. Buffalo, that's who. The Bills should still be there after this Sunday. BILLS 17, EAGLES 13.

Baltimore (1-2) at New England (0-3) — Some people might say it would be an upset if either team wins. Baltimore's new coach, Howard Schnellenberger, got his first victory last week. New England's new coach, Chuck Fairbanks, won't get his this week, unless he can sneak in his old Oklahoma team. COLTS 20, PATRIOTS 17.

Dallas (3-0) at Washington (21) — The Cowboys haven't forgotten that 26-3 pasting they got from Washington in the NFC championship game last year. But it's time for the Redskins to get into high gear and Duane Thomas has a score to settle with the Cowboys. REDSKINS 20, COWBOYS 18.

Mike Phipps field jaunts worrisome

CLEVELAND (AP) — When the quarterback runs with the ball it usually excites the crowd and worries the coach.

Cleveland Browns fans have been doing a lot of cheering and Coach Nick Skorich has been doing a lot of worrying.

"Mike (Phipps) has been taking more chances than I would like him to take," Skorich said. "I keep encouraging him not to run. Sometimes he has no choice, but I'm trying to talk him into throwing the ball more."

In the opening day game victory over the Baltimore Colts Phipps was the leading ground gainer for the Browns with 55 yards in seven carries.

Last Sunday against the New York Giants he carried the ball six times for 27 yards.

"My running is not part of the game plan," the 25-year-old quarterback said. "But sometimes I feel like our receivers are covered or I'm getting pressure from the sides so I run.

Stan Walters lost to Cincinnati Bengals

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals offensive team suffered a setback Thursday when tackle Stan Walters was hospitalized with what is believed to be hepatitis.

"He's undergoing tests," said Coach Paul Brown. "They are concerned about hepatitis, and he is definitely out of this week's game."

Logan Brooks wins Lebanon feature

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Logan Brooks, in his first victory in 34 outings, took the featured claiming pace mile in the seventh race at Lebanon Thursday night to pay $6.40, $3.40 and $2.40.

Georgana Leway placed, paying $6 and $2.80 and Split Ticket was third for $2.80. The winning time was 2:09 4-5.

Women golfers feted

Mrs. Carl Mason, the 1973 Washington Country Club champion, was honored and awards were also presented to Mrs. Max Lawrence and Latricia Robinson, who tied for runnerup honors.

First flight champion Mrs. Ralph Bray and Mrs. Richard Wintringham, the runnerup were honored along with handicap champion Mrs. Donald Moore and Mrs. William Wead, the runnerup. Mrs. Walter Oswald was the first flight champion in the handicap tournament and Mrs. Roland Holthouse was the runnerup.

THE TEAM of Mrs. Robert Heiny, Mrs. John Aills, Mrs. Phil Morrow, Mrs. Wintringham, Mrs. Oswald and captain Mrs. Wead was honored for capturing the Friday League championship.

Miss Robinson had the best league average and Mrs. Holthouse took the best competitor trophy. Mrs. Roger Miller was the most improved league golfer.

This year's officers were Mrs. Otis Hess, chairman; Mrs. Heiny, vice-chairman; Mrs. Bonnie Schneider, secretary, and Mrs. Jack Kellough, treasurer. The 1974 officers are Mrs. Heiny, chairman, and Mrs. Schneider, vice-chairman.

Mrs. Oswald will be chairman of the Friday golf league, Mrs. Bray will head the championship tournament and Mrs. Donald Anderson and Mrs. Robert Sanderson will be chairman of the handicap tourney.

Mrs. Robert Hagerty was responsible for decorations at Thursday's banquet and club pro Tony Capuana and Mrs. Arthur Terry were presented special awards.

Lions, MT face winless teams

'Cane, Circleville clash in SCOL feature tonight

Although the smoke is just beginning to clear from the starter's gun, one game into tonight's South Central Ohio League football action will have a bearing on the eventual outcome of the 46th pennant chase.

Defending champion Circleville and Wilmington will collide in theSCOL feature attraction tonight and both will be hoping to keep pace with the heavily-favored Washington C.H. Blue Lions.

IT APPEARS that a feast or famine situation is boiling in the SCOL this year with the top-ranked Washington C.H. team being the only one of the seven members showing an unblemished record. Three of the teams have two losses apiece and three others are winless.

Circleville and Wilmington will be matching identical 1-0 league records in tonight's headliner and a loss at this stage in the season could prove almost disastrous for either the Tigers or Hurryin' Hurricane if they figure to be seriously considered when the SCOL sourvenirs are doled out later this fall. Circleville and Wilmington also have identical 2-2 all-games records.

Miami Trace, idle in SCOL play a week ago, will be launching its league schedule against a winless Hillsboro team at 8 p.m. tonight at Richards Memorial Field.

While the Panthers were completing preparations for the SCOL season last week, head coach Mike Doyle's Indians were dropping a 42-6 decision to Wilmington.

Doyle, who succeeded Dale Ambos as the Hillsboro taskmaster this season, will have an added incentive in tonight's contest since he is a graduate of Miami Trace.

However, the Panthers have lost only one SCOL game in a span stretching back to the beginning of the 1971 campaign. Incidentally, the Panthers, who will be entertaining Circleville next Friday, are unbeaten against SCOL teams at Miami Trace Field. Also, it was Circleville which handed Miami Trace its last SCOL loss.

MEANWHILE, Washington C.H.'s Blue Lions, ranked atop both the Associated Press and United Press International Class AA polls this week, will be looking for the fifth consecutive win when they meet a winless Greenfield team tonight at McClain Field.

The Lions are riding the crest of a four-game winning streak and have shutout all four opponents, Greenfield would probably consider it a moral victory just to score on the stubborn Washington C.H. defense.

Washington C.H. is 1-0 in the SCOL after walloping a weak Madison Plains team last Friday. Greenfield, suffering a painful four-game nosedive, dropped a 21-6 verdict to Circleville in last week's league debut.

Elsewhere, Madison Plains will be playing state-ranked Jonathan Alder in a non-league game tonight. The Golden Eagles will be hoping to improve a 0-4 all-games mark and pad the SCOL's record of 7-15 against non-league opponents.

Wilson expands lead in SCOL point race

Washington C.H. tailback Chuck Wilson has expanded his lead in the South Central Ohio League scoring race, according to statistics compiled today.

The hard-running Wilson, who is bidding for his second straight SCOL scoring championship, has stacked up a total of 58 points in the Blue Lions' four victories.

Wilson leads the SCOL scorers by a comfortable 28-point margin. He led by 22 points a week ago. Wilson has scored nine touchdowns and two sets of extra points for the 58-point total heading into tonight's game at Greenfield.

FAYETTE Countians are continuing to rule the scoring race as they have done in past seasons. Five of the top seven scoring leaders are either from Washington C.H. or Miami Trace.

Circleville's Eddy Richter and Jackie Watson, the Wilmington speed demon are tied for second place with 30 points apiece. Larry Howell, the Washington C.H.'s all-purpose player, holds down the third place spot with 22 points and Miami Trace quarterback Tom Riley is next in line with 21 points.

Johnson leader in college rushing

NEW YORK (AP) — Widener halfback Billy Johnson, last year's national college division champion in rushing, scoring and punt returns, is off to a fast start in his bid to repeat— at least in two of those categories.

The 5-foot-9, 180-pound junior galloped for 171 yards last Saturday in Widener's season opener against Western Maryland and leads the nation in rushing, according to the weekly statistics released by the National Collegiate Sports Services today.

Lion frosh absorb third loss in row

The Washington C. H. freshman football team dropped its third game in as many outings Thursday evening, losing to the Greenfield Tigers by a margin of 30-0.

Even though the Lions defensive team hasn't been that bad, the offense has only been able to score only twice in three games. The frosh seem to move the ball well except when facing third down and long yardage. The off-tackle plays that gain the Lions most of their yardage cannot pick up the necessary first down when in a long yardage situation.

Greenfield started off its scoring spree for the first half in the first quarter. The Tigers threw in a triple reverse, ending in a pass for a touchdown. The play developed into a wide-open pass when the Lions defense failed to pick up the last boy that handled the pigskin. The extras were also made and Greenfield led 8-0.

WHEN THE Lions took over possession and failed to move the ball they were forced to punt. But, the punt skidded off the foot of the kicker and fell very short of the intended destination. The Tiger receiver caught the ball with a wide open path in front of him and scampered for the touchdown. The extras were again made and Greenfield led 16-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Again, when the Lions regained the football, they failed to make any kind of threat and were forced to turn the ball back over to their opponents.

This time Greenfield found another opening in the Lions secondary and completed a touchdown pass of over 40 yards. The extra point attempt failed, but Greenfield led at half 22-0.

The third quarter remained very calm with both teams exchanging the football but no points being put on the scoreboard.

The fourth quarter was also quiet until Greenfield scored on a short pass over the middle against the Lions' second team. The extras failed.

Washington C. H. coach John Skinner reported that the defense looked good against the run, but couldn't plug up the holes against the pass. Coach Skinner also stated that the offensive blocking was poor which kept the Lion runners in tight all evening preventing the big breakaway play.

Washington C. H., now 0-3 on the season, will entertain the Wilmington freshman at 4:30 p.m. next Thursday at Gardner Park.

Bengals, Cowboys win MT grid loop openers

The Miami Trace junior football league opened play Thursday evening at Miami Trace Field with the Bengals and Cowboys posting wins.

The Jeffersonville Bengals outlasted the Browns by a score of 14-8, while in the second contest the Cowboys popped the Rams by a score of 50-0.

With the first quarter getting under way, below threatening skies, the Bengals were the first to score. Halfback DeMent scored on a 25-yard run around left end. David Glass scored the extras and the Bengals led 8-0.

THE BROWNS failed to score on their possession and turned the ball back over to the Bengals.

This time Glass ran for a 30-yard touchdown. The extra point attempt failed and the score was 14-0.

In the second period, Eyre, for the Browns, tossed a 25-yard pass from the halfback slot to Hennesey. Hennesey then took the ball in for the score from the one-yard line on the next play. The extra point attempt was made by a pass from Riley to Eyre and the score was 14-8.

With the first half coming to an end down came the showers with the lightning increasing, the game was postponed for about 45 minutes.

When the second half got under way, on a rain-sopped field, neither team could move the ball and the final score remained at 14-8.

The Cowboys started out the scoring in the first quarter when Kevin Anderson took the ball over from the three-yard line. The extras failed and the Cowboys had their first six points.

The second touchdown came on a 48-yard pass to Bill Hanners from Art Schlichter. Again the extras failed, but the Cowboys still held the lead at 12-0.

Still in the first quarter the Cowboys scored another time. This time Dean Farris scampered around the end for 42 yards and the touchdown. The extras were scored on a pass to Chris Garland from Schlichter and after the first quarter the Cowboys led 20-0.

Starting out the second quarter the Cowboys hadn't slowed down the pace from the first stanza as Schlichter scored on an 80-yard run around the right end. The extras were good and the Cowboys led 28-0.

STILL IN the second quarter, Schlichter again scored. This time from the four-yard line. The extra points were scored on a pass to Riley from Schlichter and the Cowboys led at half 36-0.

The third period was again meaningless for the Rams offensively, but the defense only gave up one touchdown this quarter. That one coming on a 40-yard pass to Hanners from Schlichter. The extras failed but the Cowboys still had a commanding lead.

In the fourth quarter, Schlichter again passed for a touchdown, this time connecting with Farris for 24-yards. The extras were good on a pass to Anderson from Schlichter and the final score was 50-0.

Cowboy head coach Sonny Walters said he was pleased with offense and the defense. Coach Walters singled out the playing of Ralph Fast and Dennis Combs on the defensive unit, and of course, Schlichter on the offense along with many others.

All four teams will again meet on the Miami Trace Field next Thursday starting at 4:30 p.m.

Lakes season extension set

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)— Ore shippers on the Great Lakes plan to push Old Man Winter to the breaking point again this season, the Lake Carriers Association's Ice Committee said in a meeting here.

Committee members said at least 32 iron ore carriers, representing eight American fleets, would run at least into early January. And U.S. Steel Corp. said it intends to operate nine of its vessels on into February.

A strong demand for iron ore this year apparently contributed to the decision, although the ice committee has been stalling winter a little longer each year recently.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

When not sure, don't act! Wait till the facts are all in, and KNOW what they stand for. Situations could deceive if you are not alert.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Warning signals are up where behavior and disposition are concerned! Without realizing it, you could be too quick to prescribe or criticize — with unhappy results.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

A conservative and prudent attitude will keep you from going overboard through misguided enthusiasm — a tendency now.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

Though yours is not usually a passive nature, you COULD place yourself behind the front lines now through modesty. Do a little acceptable tooting of your own horn.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Avoid a present tendency toward lethargy. Gear efforts to achieve objectives more quickly. Improvise occasionally. This day can be a helpful challenge.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

You can make headway in most matters, but some concessions may be obligatory. Do not take on new ventures without thorough investigation. This is no day for acting blindly.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Express your ideas and opinions discreetly but firmly. Don't leave stones unturned which may have gems beneath. A generally good day — if you cooperate.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

Some new events in the making, perhaps a new contact. Give rein to your liveliest hopes now. Do not antogaonize those who are really well disposed toward you.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

As with many others, you will get into difficulty if you speak or act in haste now. Stick to high principles, but avoid dissension, antoagonism.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Note early that this will be on of those "give and take" days, with emphasis on the giving. The artistic, the extra trimming, the light touch can brighten all things.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

A good time to develop a dormant talent, to repeat an old strategy when others fail. Don't yield to frustration in ANY situation. Keep your eyes on a golden future.

YOU BORN TODAY are highly imaginative, productive and gregarious; are outstandingly fair-minded and have a fine sense of balance and proportion. You work with others capably, but are inclined to be "bossy" at times. In fact, your tendency to criticize too harshly could alienate persons who, otherwise, could be most helpful in advancing your interests. Try to curb this trait. Highly versatile, you could excel in music, painting, the theater or, along entirely different lines, as inventor, statesman, jurist or physician.

Transit subsidies measure passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a bill to provide $400 million in government subsidies next year to ailing urban mass transit systems, but the measure faces a possible presidential veto.

A veto was predicted Wednesday by House Republican Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan as a coalition of big-city congressmen steered the bill to a narrow 219-195 passage.

Ford said a veto was assured if the bill goes to President Nixon in the form it left the House. A similar proposal has already passed the Senate.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH

The 1973 pair of U.S. Christmas postage stamps is in keeping with recent tradition — one or a religious nature and the other of whimsical design. The two 8-centers will be issued simultaneously on Nov. 7 in Washington D.C. at the National Gallery of Art.

The nonreligious adhesive features an old-fashioned Christmas tree and is the first U.S. stamp ever designed in needlepoint. The design was by Dolli Tingle.

Both are vertical and of commemorative size. A print order of one billion indicates how many stamps are expected to be sold.

First-day cancellation requests may be sent to "Christmas Stamp, Postmaster, Washington D.C. 20013." On the upper right corner of the enclosed envelope, pencil lightly which stamp you desire. Combinations may be ordered.

Requests with proper remittance (8 cents per stamp in money order or certified check only) must be postmarked no later than Nov. 7.

THE NETHERLANDS and Surinam have issued similar stamps to honor Queen Juliana on the 25th anniversary of her accession to the Dutch throne.

A portrait of the Queen taken by Prince Claus, her son-in-law, forms the central design on each of the silver jubilee commemoratives. The Dutch 40-center has a vertical orange bar on the right side which represents the Royal House of Orange.

The Surinam 30-cent stamp has a horizontal bar across the top which includes an ellipse with five stars symbolizing the different population groups in this country, formerly Dutch Guiana.

NEW ZEALAND'S Christmas stamps will have a religious theme.

The lowest value bears the Tempi Madonna by Raphael now in a museum in Munich, West Germany. The middle value illustrates a stained glass window showing the Three Kings from St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Auckland.

The highes value depicts a family entering a church. Snow and winter scenes are not common to New Zealand Christmas designs because Dec. 25 is in the middle of its summer.

Reporter set to test shield law

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — A reporter for the Newark Advocate has been ordered to turn over Friday to a Licking County Court information she gathered in an investigative reporting assignment.

William Rogers, The Advocate's managing editor, said the reporter, Mary H. Hargrove, would appear in court but would testify the notes are property of The Advocate Printing Co.

Mrs. Hargrove will not reveal the confidential sources of her stories, Rogers said.

The notes were subpoenaed by David Pheils, operator of a water and sewer system in the nearby Forest Hills subdivision of Heath. Mrs. Hargrove wrote about problems in the subdivision in a series of 28 investigative articles.

Trial is scheduled for Oct. 15 to determine the ownership of the water and sewer system.

Rogers said the subpoena "just asked for everything," including notes which were not subsequently used as story material.

He said the notes now are in his possession.

2 Jackson Five singers charged

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — Two members of the Jackson Five rock group have been arraigned on charges of receiving stolen property from burglaries of 50 San Fernando Valley apartments.

John P. Jackson, 22, is accused on one count of receiving stolen property and his brother "Tito," 19, is charged in two counts. A third defendant, Sanders Bracy, 24, was arraigned on four counts of receiving stolen property and eight counts of burglary.

Farmers Discovered Digitalis

My father takes digitalis for his heart. At school we learned that this drug was not discovered by scientists, but by farmers. I thought it would be an interesting question to ask you about.

Karen R., Calif.

Dear Karen:

It is a most interesting question because the story of the origin of digitalis is so fascinating.

Digitalis is probably one of the best-known drugs used for the treatment of chronic heart failure. This was once known as "dropsy" because fluid tends to accumulate in the body tissues when the heart is not functioning correctly.

The value of the drug is that it strengthens the heart muscle so that it can carry out its normal pumping action.

For hundreds of years the foxglove plant was used in tribal areas and by people in the farm countries. As has happened very often in the history of medicine, many drugs have evolved in a similar way, by trial and error.

As far back as the 14th century, there are records of this valuable plant with its lifegiving ingredient, digitalis.

After a simple operation for the removal of my appendix I developed adhesions. These gave me more trouble than the appendicitis itself. Does this mean I will be prone to adhesions if I should ever have another operation?

Miss W.O., Ky.

Dear Miss O.:

Adhesions are bands of thin but strong tissue that sometimes form after surgery.

When an operation is performed in the abdomen, the intestines must be handled with extreme delicacy to avoid irritating them and stimulating the formation of adhesions.

Actually, adhesions are nature's protective device. If there is a pocket of infection, adhesions are formed to seal off the infection and keep it from spreading.

Sumptoms due to adhesions occur only when the adhesions interfere with the normal function of the intestines.

Sometimes it is necessary to reopen the abdomen to free troublesome bands of adhesions.

The surgical techniques in use today, the extra precautions, drugs and enzymes greatly reduce the frequency of postoperative adhesions.

I do not believe that you should be further concerned about adhesions.

I can't convince my employers that air conditioning makes me sick. They think it's all in my head.

Mr. J.G., S.C.

Dear Mr. G.:

Many people, like you, are made uncomfortable by air conditioning. Some insist that they catch cold; others say they are "allergic" to the cold air.

I suggest that you make every effort to avoid direct exposure.

Girls kidnapped to beat doweries

SIVAS, Eastern Turkey (AP) — The province of Sivas has broken the Turkish record for the kidnapping of young girls, reports say.

In the first seven months of 1973 alone, 211 girls and young women, between the ages of 16 and 25, have been abducted.

Abduction is a traditional part of the marriage system in Turkey, and many of the kidnappings are little more than elopements. Of the 211 girls abducted all but 53 ended up marrying their kidnappers.

Local officials blame the increase in kidnappings on the increased dowries brides are fetching. Inflation has brought the usual sum to 20,000 liras — about $1,300.

Girls being admitted to military school

BOONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — The Kemper Military Academy here will admit girls this fall for the first time since the Civil War, school officials have announced.

The coed enrollment will be limited to 30 this fall. The school expects about 1,000 boys.

Girls were accepted during the Civil War when the war depleted the male enrollment. The school opened in 1844.

Trouble looming for area college

In 1971, the Ohio Board of Regents and Vice Chancellor Dr. Max J. Lerner proposed a master plan to aid and upgrade higher education in Ohio. Now, there's trouble.

The development of the board's proposed state General and Technical College in a six-county district in Southern Ohio would provide for a comprehensive post-high school educational program within commuting distance of all area citizens, offering: an equivalent to the first two years of a traditional baccalaureate program, an array of two-year technical educational programs designed to prepare students for direct entry into paraprofessional occupations, and various courses for adults for personal development and upgrading of work skills.

The counties in Southwest Ohio which the plan would serve are: Hamilton, Clermont, Fayette, Highland, Brown and Clinton.

The problem lies in location; for in these counties are: the University of Cincinnati's Walters, Clermont, and Tri-County branches; Scioto Technical; the Portsmouth and Chillicothe branches of Ohio University; Clark Technical; Sinclair Community; Miami University's Middletown and Hamilton branches; Cincinnati Technical, and two other CU branches, the Ohio College of Applied Science and University College.

DR. WARREN BENNIS, president of the University of Cincinnati has issued a statement concerning the university's position regarding the Board of Regent's higher education plans.

He is worried with enrollment down all over the state, and that the Board of Regent's plan, if instituted, would hurt the University of Cincinnati and its branches even more.

At the same time, Dr. Bennis has requested permission from the Board of Regents to establish another branch of UC known as Tri-County and another technical college at the Clinton County Air Force Base.

The Board of Regents has never officially created the Tri-County branch of UC, but the board did officially permit the university to spend part of its capital appropriation to purchase a site for the branch.

Chapter 3358 of the Ohio Revised Code enables state universities and-or technical colleges to reorganize as State General and Technical Colleges. These are to be governed by nine trustees appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Senate.

These institutions may offer general studies, technical education and adult education programs which are financed by state tax subsidies and student fees without reliance on a local property tax.

The Code also indicates that State General and Technical Colleges can only occur following a resolution passed by the Board of Trustees at the University of Cincinnati.

Dr. Bennis, statement reaffirms "the university is most anxious to cooperate fully with the Ohio Board of Regents toward the goal of expanding and improving higher education opportunities for the citizens of Southwestern Ohio" but, he doesn't want repetition by the Board of Regent's State General and Technical College plan in counties where the branches of UC are doing the exact same thing.

Courts

MARRIAGE APPLICATION

Marlyn D. Anderson, 45, Tower Mobile Park, factory worker, and Sheila Markley, 42, Rt. 2, Washington C.H., quality control supervisor.

JUVENILE COURT

A 15-year-old Washington C.H. boy was found to be delinquent and placed on probation by Juvenile Judge Rollo M. Marchant. The boy was charged with shoplifting from Watson's Office Supply and the G.C. Murphy Co.

JUVENILE TRAFFIC

Roxanne L. Stone, 16, daughter of Mrs. Donna Miles, Creed Rd., received a 30-day suspension of her operator's license in Juvenile Court. She had been cited for speeding.

Steven O. Hedges, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hedges, Worthington Rd., was remanded to his parents for discipline after it was determined that he had improperly passed another vehicle.

Julia A. Blake, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blake, U.S. 35-NW, was required to attend the next defensive driving course when she was found to be a juvenile traffic offender. She had been cited for speeding.

DIVORCE GRANTED

K. Gayle Keller, 1503 Columbus Ave., has been granted a divorce in Common Pleas Court from Paul P. Keller on grounds of neglect of duty. The plaintiff was awarded custody of, and support for, the parties' minor child.

Extinguishers demonstrated

The Washington C.H. Fire Department demonstrated fire extinguisher techniques in the back parking lot of Fayette Memorial Hospital.

Carey W. Rinehart, plant service director and safety chairman at the hospital, arranged the demonstration in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 7-13.

Volunteers from the audience of 74 were given a chance to develop their skills in extinguishing fires.

The demonstration was made possible by the Washington C.H. Fire Department and the Fire and Safety Equipment Co.

BIE Day plans discussed

Preliminary plans for the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce's Business - Industry - Education (BIE) Day program for students at Washington Senior and Miami Trace high schools were discussed at a meeting of the Chamber's Education Committee Thursday.

Ron Warner, education committee chairman, said different approaches to the BIE Day program are being explored. He said the committee will survey sophomores at both high schools in an attempt to obtain information on the different jobs they would like represented.

In the past, the education committee has selected the different representatives for the program. Also in the past, the BIE Day program has been presented to high school seniors. The committee felt that by the time of the BIE Day program, most of the graduating seniors have already decided upon their future.

The committee indicated the BIE Day program would be presented earlier in the year, but no dates were set.

A committee to lay groundwork for the program was named. Members are John Lachat, the Chamber's board representative, Bruce Galloway, chairman of last year's program, Mrs. Roberta Bowers, James Vess, Principal Fred Jones, of Washington Senior High School, Principal Curtis Fleisher, of Miami Trace High School, and Warner.

Thunderstorm dampens WCH

A noisy, lightning-laced thunderstorm apparently caused few troubles for Washington C. H. utility companies Thursday night.

The bad weather, which started late Thursday afternoon with a heavy drizzle, dumped .38 of inch of precipitation on Washington C. H., according to official weather observer Coyt A. Stookey.

George Winkle, of the Dayton Power and Light Co., in Washington C.H., reported only a few power outages around the Washington C. H. area. Winkle said lightning hit a transformer and branch lines near Greenfield, causing scattered outages.

No problems were reported by Bruce Galloway, commercial manager at Ohio Bell here. Galloway said Ohio Bell experienced some troubles late Wednesday afternoon when a carrier located near Harrisburg was damaged by lightning, but he said service was restored by 10 a.m. Thursday to the few customers that were affected.

County draws relief money

Fayette County received $6,036.21 in general relief subsidy money during the month of September, according to Joseph T. Ferguson, state auditor.

A total of $8,737,766.94 was distributed to Ohio's 88 counties through the state-financed subsidy program for the purpose of partially defraying administrative and general relief costs of the individual county welfare operations. It is in addition to federal-state financed assistance programs such as Aid for Dependent Children, Aged, Disabled and Blind.

Distribution to other neighboring counties included: Clinton, $15,643.89; Greene, $113,196.38; Highland, $23,861.30; Madison, $5,469.22; Pickaway, $13,803.35, and Ross, $30,876.85.

The size of the September distribution ranged from $819.09 in Putnam County to $2,616,867.45 in Cuyahoga County. Montgomery County received $968,868.60.

Jeff Council adjourns; fails to muster quorum

JEFFERSONVILLE — There was no Village Council meeting Thursday night. Roll call failed to turn up a quorum, so President George Reedy adjourned the session.

Meetings are regularly scheduled for the first and third Thursdays of each month, but whether a special session will be held before the next one was not determined. Indications, however, are that one will be to open bids on materials for street improvement.

Greenfield woman hurt in intersection wreck

A Greenfield woman was hospitalized after a traffic accident early Friday and three persons received minor injuries in crashes Thursday.

As she was approaching the intersection, she saw a pickup truck pulling from Capps Road and turned to avoid a collision. The car struck the pole, traveled across the lawn at the Russell Grice residence and swerved into a field.

The driver was treated for a fractured shoulder and multiple abrasions at Fayette Memorial Hospital. No one was cited.

Ray E. Kingery, 17, Rt. 3, Washington C. H., was driving on Milledgeville - Octa Road Thursday afternoon when a dog ran onto the roadway, causing him to swerve and lose control of the car. The car was a total loss after it struck a tree. Both Kingery and his passenger, Robert E. Bartruff, Rt. 3, Washington C. H., claimed injury but did not require treatment at the time.

Florence I. Hidy, 30, Washington - Waterloo Rd., drove off the right side of Bogus Road at 3:50 p.m. Thursday hitting a tree. Four-year-old Cindy J. Hidy, a passenger, was injured but did not require treatment. Damage to the vehicle was moderate.

Three other accidents were reported Thursday.

POLICE

3:35 p.m. — Karen D. Massie, 24, of 526 Albin Ave., backed from a parking space on N. Main Street and struck a car driven by Darrell D. Smith, 23, Ford Rd., causing minor damage.

8:40 p.m. — Jean E. Lomerson, 43, Bush Rd., backed from a driveway hitting a car owned by Steven M. Taylor, 20, of U.S. 35-NW, which was illegally parked in an alley. She was cited for backing without due regard to safety, and Taylor was given a parking ticket. Damage was minor.

SHERIFF

8:45 a.m. — Lloyd J. Lyons, 42, Greenfield, was driving on Ohio 41 near Rowe-Ging Road when a stone flew from the tire of a truck immediately in front of him, cracking the car's windshield. Joseph A. Yates, 22, Londonderry, was driving the truck.

Coffman to expand

LOGAN — The City Zoning Board has approved tentative plans by the Coffman Stair Co. to install a new $70,000 double drying kiln. The new unit will hold about 100,000 board feet of lumber, Carl Garrett, plant manager, said.
